"I want my arms around them all."

James V. Zizzi describes it as a return to the nesting instinct. It's only natural to rejoice a bit when the last of the kids moves out. Care to dance? I'll get the champagne. But eventually there are grandkids you want to spoil. Or perhaps a rather large and still growing extended family. Many of the clients of James V. Zizzi express a desire for a place for all to gather to celebrate, to laugh, to remember, and come back to ... for generations.

A place with a huge hearth where old memories can be relived, new ones created. A place where meals can be prepared and secret family recipes shared. A place with expansive windows overlooking the children safe at play.

Some builders see empty nesters as a market opportunity. James V. Zizzi sees them as part of his growing family.

Sharks to Vote?

Hold Public Meeting to Decide the Future of Shark Tournaments

By Dan Rattiner

Montauk bills itself as the Fishing Capital of the World. This is no public relations stunt. It's the truth. If you take a look at the list of current world saltwater fishing records — which I did in my World Almanac last week — you will find that twice as many of them are held by fishermen from Montauk than from fishermen at any other fishing port in the entire world.

Our most recent entries are a 22-pound, 7-ounce summer flounder caught by Charles Nappi and a 528-pound Blue shark caught by Joe Seidel in July of 2001.

Sharks are a relatively new thing. Until one particular deep-sea fisherman came along in Montauk in 1950, shark fishing was unheard of in these parts. But Captain Frank Mundus arrived in Montauk that year and began taking enthusiastic fishermen out to catch killer sharks. He caught one Great White Shark that was over 3,500 pounds. But because, in the end, he had to shoot it rather than catch it on rod and reel, it didn't qualify for the record books. The record remains, to this day, a 2,664 pound Great White, caught by an Australian in 1973.

However, Mundus' accomplishments with shark fishing sparked an enthusiasm which led to a series of shark fishing competitions, which are now held every year by the Montauk Marine Basin, the Star Island Yacht Club and the Montauk Yacht Club. The enthusiasm also sparked the making of the movie JAWS, which, frankly, had been inspired by Frank Mundus. A whole lot of people get eaten by the Great White in the movie. It is considered one of the ten best movies of all time.

At this point, the shark tournaments, along with some surfing tournaments, have become a sort of centerpiece for the tourist season in Montauk. More than $150,000 is given to the winners at the four shark tour-

RIVERHEAD, IRAN, & AN ARREST IN CALIFORNIA

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, a federal judge in California sentenced a popular flight instructor at an airport in Orange County to two years in jail for crating up stolen F-14 fighter jet spare parts and trying to sent them to Iran. His name is Reza Tabib, he is 52 years old, speaks four languages and was born in Tehran. He is the son of a well-known judge there. People seem amazed that such a nice guy would try to do such a thing. But he did.

The F-14, featured in the Tom Cruise movie Top Gun, was the most sophisticated and best fighter plane in the world during the 1970s, 1980s and 1990s. It was built by Grumman at their plant in Riverhead. It took two pilots to fly it. All together, about 712 of them were put into service.

According to the Pentagon, there are only two countries in the world that still use F-14 fighter jets, the aircraft that was featured in the movie Top Gun and built here in a factory in Riverhead. Those two countries are the United States and Iran. Most recently, the United States aircraft carrier USS Nimitz sailed into the Gulf of Aqaba to join the rest of the American fleet there. Onboard, backing up the current Navy carrier jet of choice, the F-18, was a squadron of F-14s. Across the Gulf sit the F-14s of Iran.

How Iran came to be the only other country in the world to get F-14s is an interesting story.

The fighter was considered so good when it was first put into service that the Pentagon ruled that it could not be sold to any other country, even our allies. However, in late 1979, the Shah of Iran was in trouble and under pressure from Islamic Militants to resign and allow an Islamic based government to be formed. There was fighting. As a result,

It's quite a downsize for Joel and his wife, because his current house, which is not out here at all, but eighty miles away in Centre Island, is an old WASP estate of about 9,000 square feet. Scheider's house is about 2,500 square feet. The Center Island property is currently for sale for $32.5 million, if you're interested. The Scheider house was sold to Joel for about half that. And Roy and Brenda Scheider are not moving away. They've bought a small whaler's house in Sag Harbor, inland, which they are restoring and hope to be able to occupy in August. Meanwhile, they are upstairs at the American Hotel in Sag Harbor

We move so many pianos we could give lessons.

In fact we do. The professionals from Despatch Moving and Storage that pad, pack, load, drive, and unload your possessions have received hours and hours of training long before we let them touch any of your belongings, let alone your Baby.

Despatch began moving people in 1910. Even then they realized the key to successful moves wasn't just strong backs and powerful trucks. It was heart. Caring about the people they were moving and the things that made their house a home were more important.

Today, the thank you letters we receive from our clients are music to our ears. Many of the words used strike a familiar chord – careful, friendly, understanding, professional, courteous, and efficient. We're not surprised. Moving pianos is not our only forte. Our staff knows how to baby your antiques, collectibles, fine art, furniture, as well as your floors and walls. In short, if you're planning a move call us — but only if you want to be babied in grand style.

naments. And the shark meat is cut up at the dock and distributed to food pantries for needy people in the area.

Now, here comes a group that wants to shut down the four shark fishing competitions.

The call has come from The Humane Society of the United States, which sent a letter to the East Hampton Town Board calling upon them to send police officers to the four competitions — the first one is on June 17, which is Father's Day — and close them down. The reason given is that the shark population in oceans around the world is declining. And a cause of the decline is surely these shark tournaments, which the Humane Society says are the biggest tournaments of their kind in the world. They also say that being caught is a very humiliating experience for a shark.

Here are some excerpts from this letter, written by John Grandy, Senior Vice President for Wildlife and Habitat Protection at the Humane Society:

"It is time for a change in the way we view sharks and their protection. Nothing could be less educational or more degrading and demeaning to sharks than the cheers and jeers that greet the display and awarding of prize money for the biggest dead shark in each of multiple categories... We call upon you to take a leadership position with respect to protecting sharks and your reputation for serious conservation and humane standards, and call for an immediate indefinite moratorium on the Star Island Shark Tournaments and all other Montauk Shark Tournaments."

Jeers?

Are there people out there jeering at the dead sharks, laughing and pointing and shouting, "That ought to show you, you sharks, for what you've done, eating various humans around the world."

Whether this letter is serious or not — it urges the Town Supervisor to refuse to grant the proper gathering permits required to hold the tournaments — it certainly has gotten everybody talking nevertheless.

For one thing, at least one of the tournaments is a catch-and-release affair. No shark is killed. Though, maybe, catching a shark and then releasing it could cause troublesome emotional problems for it in the future. Perhaps it can't sleep at night. Stuff like that.

As for the other three tournaments, the only sharks taken are the largest. Perhaps 50 boats enter each tournament. They will only bring back one shark each. This is hardly a dent in a body of water that covers two thirds of the earth.

Lisa Grenci, the chairman of the Montauk Citizens Advisory Committee, had this to say: "They reuse the meat that is caught. It's not like they're killing for killing's sake. We feel it's important for our economy. We are a fishing community and the tournament is for a good cause. As far as I know, no local people have raised any objections."

And then there is this weird comment about the humiliation dealt to the sharks on the dock while being held up by their tails

Strange Creatures Wandering Around on a Lawn in Bridgehampton

By Dan Rattiner

I swear, if Rip Van Winkle woke up after a twenty-year sleep in front of the offices of Dan's Papers on Friday, he would think we are so bizarre.

I am not talking about our building. It's the same building, with the same clapboard shingles, the same sculpture out front and the same neon sign by the front door. What's different is the group of seven people on the front lawn. Four were wandering aimlessly around, occasionally gesturing with their hands or doing something with their heads and not saying one word to one another. The other three were standing in one place, looking dreamily into space, occasionally exhaling cigarette smoke.

It was the most amazing thing. Here it was, a beautiful day in early June, with the sun shining and the temperature about seventy degrees and here I was, heading westbound on the Montauk Highway with my turn signal on, waiting to turn into our driveway. What I should have been seeing, if it were a situation where seven people would be out on the lawn 20 years ago, is seven people chatting happily with one another.

But oh no. The active four were gesturing and pacing back and forth, sometimes coming so close to the others that those standing still had to slide out of the way to avoid getting shoved aside. Those on their cell phones were Tom Swinimer, our delivery manager, Jean Lynch, our North Fork sales executive, Janine Cheviot, our assistant editor, and Victoria Cooper, our coordinating editor. Considering the paper bag in Janine's hand, I figured she was just coming back from Bob's Village Market next door with her lunch when her cell phone rang, stopping her in her tracks. Tom Swinimer's delivery crew was in the back, loading up bundles and skids of Dan's Papers into white pickup trucks and he was up front having a one on one conversation with some-

EXPOSING THE EAST END'S UGLY GAS RIP-OFF

By Dan Rattiner

One of the things that happens when you continuously publish a weekly newspaper for years and years is that you see public officials doing the same hopeless things that have been done by others years before. They're new on the scene. So they forge ahead. What do they know? So I write about the coincidence. Sometimes it helps.

I refer, of course, to a newly elected official's most recent announcement that he has discovered that the further east you go on Long Island, the higher the price of gasoline. And, by God, he is going to fix this scandal. This week, for the first time, the price of gasoline was $4 a gallon out in Montauk. In East Hampton it was $3.80. In Southampton it was $3.60 and in Riverhead it was $3.40. And, of course, the further west you go the less it costs.

He's mad as hell and, on behalf of his constituents, he is not going to take it anymore, he said in a dramatic, fist-shaking, determined manner. He's going to fix it and punish the perpetrators. The flashbulbs popped and the people cheered.

Well, I will spare you his identity.

As I recall, the first person who announced this exact investigation was Teddy Roosevelt. He was Governor of New York at the time and it was 1899 and the automobile had just been invented. I was just a tiny tot on a tricycle. But I was there at his news conference.

In more recent times, this exact same investigation, which led to no result, was announced by New York Mayor Jimmy Walker in 1927, by Congressman Stuyvesant Wainwright II in 1956 (R-Wainscott), by Congressman Otis Pike (R-Riverhead) in 1967, by New York State Speaker of the House Perry Duryea Jr. (R-Montauk) in 1977, and I forget who in 1980 or 1990, but in 2000 it was Assemblyman Fred body because he needed privacy. Jean Lynch was apparently headed next door to the market to get her lunch when her phone rang, and I have no idea what Victoria Cooper was doing out there.

As for the other three people, I will not say who they were, because they know who they are, but they were there because they could not be inside. They stood almost motionless, staring out into space, and every once in a while, they would each raise a hand to their mouths to take a drag and then remove their hand and blow out the smoke. None of the three moved much, and none of them spoke to any of the others.

"Rip," I said to the imaginary old fellow sitting next to me, "make of it what you will, the place has gone nuts."

As for me, I knew that sometime soon there had to be a break in this long line of cars, so I could end my viewing of this little front lawn playlet and pull into the driveway and into my parking space.

But then I saw, in the line of cars next to me going eastbound, a vision I will not soon forget.

I don't know about you, but while driving around the Hamptons, I often find myself turning my head to watch a really interesting-looking couple drive by in a really interesting-looking car.

It's always a convertible. Sometimes red, sometimes yellow, sometimes powder blue. And in it is almost always some very prosperous looking older fellow with slicked back hair sitting next to a slender fashion model with blonde hair, dark glasses and a big white hat with a ribbon.

I know it's sort of silly, but these visions participate in my mind as a sort of contest. Somewhere out there, there is the perfect car and couple. And this is one of the entrants.

Well, waiting to turn into the zombie driveway at Dan's Papers that morning, I had found the winners — there was no mistaking it.

The vehicle was an enormous HUM-VEE. The real thing, the military version after which the Hummer was copied. It had oversize tires, a roll bar, a camouflage paint job and no top. And it was splattered in mud.

And here was the couple. The driver was a man of about forty, naked from the waist up, with a crown of unkempt curly blond hair, dark sunglasses, a flower-patterned bathing suit and a suntanned, hairy chest.

His left hand was on the wheel. His right arm was draped over the shoulders of this amazing creature next to him, a 120-pound-soaking-wet, beige water dog sitting obediently on the passenger seat, facing forward, his pink tongue hanging out from what had apparently been a glorious run on the beach.

The entry glided by, the driver turning his head neither left toward my front turn blinker nor right toward the zombies. Just so cool.

Rip, wake up. Wake up, Rip, you're falling asleep. •

The Special Joys of Owning a 50-Year-Old Convertible Sports Car

By Dan Rattiner

This past weekend, 200 people who own classic, 40-year-old cars showed up in a field in Amagansett to show off their old cars. There were Pontiac Firebirds, vintage Mercedes, Beamers, old Cadillacs with tail fins and classic 57 Thunderbirds. Many of those who own these cars bought them over the last few years for investment purposes. They might think that the cars are beautiful, but they stand around waiting to hear numbers — how much they could sell cars for. Whether the market was right. Whether they ought to wait.

These people are not old car buffs. They are just at these meets fishing to make a sale. Maybe they even think that the people at these shows who had owned their cars forever — they were in the majority — were just a big yawn. Who wants to listen to them talk about their cars?

Well, I do. I am among those people who buy something, lives with it for dozens of years and then just keeps it forever. These things hold great memories. And if they are now worth a lot of money? We couldn't care less. We have no interest in ever selling them. And I will tell you why.

Back in late April, during a warm spell, I went out to my garage and opened the door and there was the car I bought when I was 24 years old, hitting the bars looking for girls here in the Hamptons.

I didn't have much money when I was 24 years old. But when I saw this racy, red sports car sitting out in front of a bar in Hampton Bays with a FOR SALE sign on it, I thought, boy that's for me. I bought it. I've owned it ever since. And there, last April, more than 40 years later, there it was. Oh, the stories it could tell.

The car is a 1959 Triumph TR-3. When I bought it, it was six years old — a used car. The guy who owned it was getting married and his wife wanted him to get rid of it. Those days with his TR-3 were gone forever. Now he'd be driving a station wagon. And so I test drove it and then wrote him a check for the $800 he wanted for it. It had 47,000 miles on it. Today, it has 98,000 miles. So I rarely use it.

Here's what I like about my TR-3:

At the front end, there is a round hole in the center of the grille. In 1959, when they made it, they wanted to have a way to start the car in the event that the battery was dead or the starter motor was broken. So there was this hole and this metal crank you could slide into it, a zigzag thing that you could turn and possibly get the car to fire itself up. Of course it could backfire and kick the cylinders backwards in a jolt, which could reverse the crank and break your arm. But that didn't happen often.

So that was your backup.

I've never tried it.

By the way, I lost the crank about twenty years ago. Last year, however, I bought another one on eBay for $35. I haven't tried that one either.

Triumph was a viable car manufacturing company with a plant northwest of London back in the day. In 1957, they made the first

2007 CLASSIC CAR AUCTION & CONCOURS D'ELEGANCE

By Daniel Simone

This upcoming weekend will surely thrill the souls and, perhaps, exercise the checkbooks of vintage automobile enthusiasts. The Hamptons Auto Classic Auction, an established, yearly Hampton event, will once again take place, this time on Saturday, June 9. The Kensington Motor Group is promoting the event. Peter Mole, a British subject by birth, is the president of Kensington Motor Group and has scheduled the renowned annual local automobile gala, the Hamptons Concours d'Elegance, a traditional prestigious show and contest of impeccable classic autos on the day following the auction, Sunday, June 10. The term 'concours d'elegance' is a French expression meaning, "contest for purity and elegance." Serious automobile aficionados regard these proceedings almost as if it were a sacred ceremony. In fact, the vehicle that the judges declare the best of the Concours, upon receiving the award, instantly gains prestige and market value.

These two consecutive events will be a real home run for the enthusiasts' weekend. The Bidder's Cocktail Reception will precede the auction on Friday evening, June 8, starting at 6:00 p.m. and ending at 8:00 p.m. Most perspective buyers restrict their serious examinations to the vehicles they've selected

TR-3. It had a five speed standard shift with four forward speeds and one reverse. It was not particularly fast, but it was cool-looking and reliable for its time. The engineers decided NOT to design a new engine for it. Instead, they bought reliable, four-cylinder farm tractor engines from a factory that made them and modified them to fit under the hood. My original one is still there, still working. They made this model of TR-3 until 1961. All together, they made about 20,000 of them.

Air conditioning in the car is provided by a metal lever that pushes open a vent on the hood directly in front of the windshield. With the vent closed, the air whooshed around the sides of the car. With the vent opened, it came down into the cockpit as a brisk wind to cool you off. Of course, no matter what you did you were out in the open air. The car does have a soft leather top that you can push up and down like you'd push a sunbonnet on a baby carriage. It has snaps that you click onto the top of the windshield to keep it up there. But it really isn't effective in keeping the rain out.

Yes, there is heat. It is a metal box on the floor above the foot pedals that has a fan in it. It has two modes, operated by the twist knob on the dashboard. If you turned it ON and it got too hot, you turned it OFF.

I was wrong when I said the car only has a leather top. It has a hard top, shaped like a hard top, that you can set on top of the open cockpit, with the leather top down, and attach with latches. The front latches of the hard top go on the top of the windshield. The back ones go on the rear fenders. If you hit a big bump, which I did in June of 1981 in Southampton while going 20-miles-per-hour instead of 5-miles-an-hour, it flies off and lands in the road, scaring the hell out of you and everybody else, particularly those behind you. This top, today, is resting in the roof rafters in my garage. It has gouges in it from hitting the road. It has been up there since that day in June of 1981.

All the gauges set in the dashboard have white needles behind glass that point to things. The big gauges indicate the car's speed in miles-per-hour and the engine's revolutions per minute. Smaller gauges indicate the engine's temperature, whether the battery is charging or discharging, the water temperature in the radiator and the level of fuel in the gas tank.

There are also two buttons. One is called STARTER. You press it and it causes the car's starter motor to turn over. The other button says CHOKE and it's a pull button. When you pull it out, it increases the amount of gasoline that comes to the spark plugs. You need to choke the gas to get an excessive amount to the spark plugs in order to get it to fire and first start up. After it runs for a while, it warms up and doesn't need all that gas. It starts to run rough with the choke on. So you push in the choke. It smoothes out. It sounds like a single engine airplane.

The other items on the dashboard are twists. One operates the heater, ON and OFF. The other operates the windshield wiper, ON or OFF.

That's about it for the luxury items in this car. There are rearview mirrors on the front fenders that are fully adjustable if somebody gets out of the car and goes up there and twists them until you say THAT'S IT, they're aimed right.

Oh, and it does have one other luxury, which I think they had in the 1959 version for the first time — blinking turn signals. There was a lever atop the center stalk of the steering wheel, right above the horn, that you could push sideways and the blinking light in back would turn on that side. After you turned, while you were straightening the wheel, something inside the center stalk would pass a certain raised metal point and the turn signal would snap back to its central position, thereby automatically turning the blinking light off ALL BY ITSELF. Wow!

That feature, by the way, stopped working on my car around 1991. You push the turn signal and it does make the turn signal blink, but after the turn you have to remember to push it back.

I should say that another luxury feature on the dashboard is a single blinking light to indicate that the blinking turn taillight is on, to remind you to turn it off. The car has no safety features whatsoever. The rear seat is a wooden plank with a leather and cotton affair attached atop it. Only one person can sit back

Opossum vs. Prada

Expensive Shoes, an Animal and a Gun in Westhampton Beach

By David Lion Rattiner

Sometimes you just get pissed off and bust out your handgun on an opossum. That's what happened on the night of February the 8th in Westhampton Beach at the Home of Westhampton Beach Deputy Mayor Jim Kametler. The case has finally been declared closed, after being investigated by Suffolk County District Attorney Thomas Spota for months. There have been salary cuts demanded and agreed upon by the Deputy Mayor, there have been meetings held, there has been talk about him getting fired and finally, there is just the plain and unmistakable reality of a frustrated village official who got so annoyed that an opossum dared to cross into his territory that he decided to unleash hell.

So what really happened that night? The following is loosely based on true accounts and police statements.

It was late at night and Deputy Mayor Jim Kametler was trying to get some sleep, but his anxiety was keeping him awake. He had parking tickets on the brain, along with beach permits and variances. He could usually handle the stress, but on this particular night, all he wanted was some peace and quiet.

He got out of bed for a drink of water, turned off the television set, which was still on, took a deep breath and relaxed. He suddenly could feel the weight of the world falling from his shoulders. Sleep would now come. So then he opened the window and listened to the sound of the country. There was absolutely nothing to hear but the blowing of the wind.

The mayor closed his eyes and smiled.

But then, he heard an odd sound. There was a rustle and then a squeak. There was something alive, outside, making noise and it immediately awoke the hunter inside the Deputy Mayor. And that's when he saw it: an opossum, staring at him with it's two beady eyes and crinkly little nose. The Deputy Mayor's heart plummeted. He did not want this animal near his home. "Go on, get out of here!" he said, but the opossum didn't seem to notice. "Go on, I said. Shoo! Shoo!" And then he opened his window and threw his shoe at the opossum and it scampered away. "Finally," he said.

But then he realized that the shoe he threw

WE PREDICT 5 HURRICANES... NO... 8 HURRICANES

By Dan Rattiner

Last Thursday was the official start of the hurricane season. And so the official in charge of making the prediction of what the hurricane season was going to be like this summer got up in front of the headquarters in Colorado and said that the ocean had warmed up off Los Angeles and, because of that, we can expect three to five major hurricanes to hit the eastern seaboard this summer and another dozen hurricanes with slightly lesser winds and rains. So, it'll be pretty bad.

Last year, the official predicted between eight and ten major hurricanes on the eastern seaboard, because of some factors with El Niño south of Hawaii and we didn't have even one. It was the first time in thirty-five years that not one single hurricane hit the East Coast.

The year before that, he predicted we'd have an off year with very few hurricanes because things were quiet in Botswana, Africa and at least seven hit, including four that passed within ten miles of my 92-year-old mother in Pompano Beach, Florida during a span of six weeks — she stood her ground — and another that flattened and flooded New Orleans.

The year before that, he was wrong too.

How much do we pay this guy? And how much does the big weather forecasting headquarters in Colorado cost us taxpayers?

I think we would be better off if we fire this guy, cut off funding, dynamite the Colorado lab and just find some guy shuffling down the street in Denver, spruce him up, give him ten bucks and put him on the air.

"Hurricane season has started," he could say. "Good luck." •

outside was the wrong shoe. It was one half of his best pair. In fact, his only pair of good shoes. Prada shoes. $1,000 Prada shoes that he had won in an online auction. These shoes were his prized possession. Instantly the mayor popped up out of bed and went to the window to see if he could locate the shoe before venturing outside. But, of course, it was too late. The opossum was back and was poking around in his shoe. "Son of a..." he yelled and he ran out in the hall, then downstairs, then outside, "Shoo, shoo!" he yelled. And he headed outside to grab his Prada shoe, getting wet grass stuck to his feet.

The opossum was not about to back down to the Deputy Mayor and began to drag the shoe all around the yard. The Deputy Mayor chased the opossum from one end of the yard to another in his pajamas. But every time the mayor got close to the opossum it would scoot away with the shoe. It was almost as if it was toying with him. "Do you have any idea who I am?"

The Deputy Mayor snapped. And he marched back inside. This opossum had messed with the wrong guy. Trailing wet grass through the house, the mayor grabbed his .38-caliber Smith & Wesson Chief's Special, his favorite pistol and loaded it.

He saw the opossum. "This is the end of the line for you," he said and fired.

But the opossum was still standing and now was smirking at him. He fired again, but right when the mayor pulled the trigger, the opossum jumped.

An expert marksman, the mayor fired a third time and then a fourth and then a fifth. With each shot, another light went on inside neighboring homes. What was wrong? Was there a car backfiring? Nobody fires guns around here.

The opossum was wounded and looked at the mayor as if to say, "Why? Why have you done this to me? It was just a shoe!" and limped off into the woods.

Within minutes, a police officer showed up. Lt. Gonce was concerned at first, thinking that his friend Deputy Mayor Kametler was in trouble. But when he learned the story, he found himself in a bind. After all, what the Deputy Mayor had done was very illegal. The Deputy Mayor had just broken the law of Second Degree reckless endangerment, a misdemeanor and had also broken the New York State Environmental Conservation Law, which states that you can't fire a gun within 500 feet of another residence. But this was the Deputy Mayor, so he would get a break.

After a laugh and after putting the gun away, the mayor went to sleep and the opossum went back to its home, to nurse its wound and tell its friends the story of how he drove the Deputy Mayor of Westhampton Beach nuts for a night.•

The Girls of Montauk

Montauk in Playboy, Blurred in the Background, but Neverthe less

By Justin DeMarco

The wait is finally over.

It's been almost nine months since Michael Dweck photographed "The Girls of Montauk" in various locations around that town for a pictorial essay that will run in the July issue of Playboy coming out today.

The 22 photos will tell the story of "a surf weekend with girlfriends chilling by the beach," photographer Michael Dweck said during a telephone interview. "It's not about bars or clubs."

Dweck, who has been camping, staying at friends' houses and renting in Montauk since the late 1970s, has an understanding of the lives of Montauk surfers, as is evident in his recent book, The End: Montauk, N.Y., dedicated to Montauk's surfing culture.

Playboy magazine had originally approached Dweck about this project and once he accepted the offer, handed him the reins.

"I could have shot this anywhere in the world, but I chose Montauk," Dweck said. "To me, Montauk is a very hedonistic place. With the beaches, it's a natural place. Still very much a small town compared to East Hampton."

Inspired by Playboy's natural look during the late 1960s, Dweck set out to recapture the concept of the girl next door. "I wanted it to go back to Playboy in the 1960s because I think that's the charm of Playboy," Dweck said.

Setting out to find subjects who were "girls you'd want to know as a friend," Dweck chose the five models — Jamie, Nicole, Reby, Camila and Carime — himself.

"What all the girls have in common is that they all love the water," Dweck said. "Everyone I photographed lived by the sea."

All of the models currently live in New York and summer in Montauk. Jamie was the sole Montauk native and Nicole grew up in Levittown. Two of the models are from Brazil.

Jamie is a nineteen-year-old college student with beauty and brains. The five-foot-seven,

LOHAN REHAB IN THE WORKS IN SOUTHAMPTON?

By Janine Cheviot

Less than three months after his release from prison, Michael Lohan, father of Hollywood party girl and actress Lindsay Lohan, announced plans to open a church and rehab center in Southampton with support from wealthy financial backers, including Stephen Baldwin. The $15 million facility would be situated on a 10-acre lot on County Road 39, currently owned by Donald Havrilla, the pastor of the Southampton Full Gospel Church. Both Mr. Lohan and Mr. Baldwin have stumbled down the road of addiction before and wish to create a "faith-based" environment of wellness that offers high-end accommodations for affluent addicts. After being approached by the two men, Havrilla said he was "pleasantly surprised" by their ideas. Prior to their meeting, Havrilla had never heard of Lindsay Lohan, but now says he is praying for her.

Mr. Lohan became a minister while serving time for attempted assault, unlicensed driving and other charges. He currently counsels troubled youth, while still receiving treatment himself, at a facility in West Babylon. Mr. Baldwin, a born-again Christian, has focused mostly on evangelizing the youth of America since he converted shortly after 9/11. He has directed and produced several DVDs featuring Christian athletes involved in extreme sports and his book, Unusual Suspect, a NY Times bestseller, details his conversion to Evangelicalism. In January, he launched a ministry in San Diego called Uprising!, which features extreme sport competitions and Christian rock concerts.

In reference to the future patients of the proposed rehab center in Southampton, Pastor Havrilla said that they would not be spoiled. He added, "They must accept Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior if they are going to be here." Does this mean that Britney Spears, a Kabbalist, would not be invited to enjoy the posh accommodations if she were to have another stint in rehab? And what exactly are the luxurious amenities that these centers offer? Aside from breathtaking views, high-end facilities such as Promises in Malibu and Wonderland in West Hollywood offer their "guests" private rooms with 1,000-thread count sheets, cozy fireplaces, tennis and basketball courts, swimming pools, spa treatments and horseback riding. A one-month stay costs hazel-eyed babe with light brown hair is currently studying Architecture at Tulane University.

"She's local and represents what Playboy was about in the 1960s," Dweck said, about hand-picking Jamie. "She's an all-American surfer girl."

Back on the East End for the summer, Jamie is working two summer jobs — one at a health food store in Montauk and the other at a Southwestern place in East Hampton.

No one has questioned her decision to pose nude in Playboy thus far

"Everyone out here is pretty liberal," Jamie said during a phone interview. "Everyone who has found out is like, 'Congrats!' No one has approached me like, 'What the hell did you do?'"

Jamie's family was put at ease knowing Dweck was the one behind the lens. Dweck has known Jamie, her mother and her sister for almost five years. He has taken pictures of each of them at one point or another on the beaches of Montauk.

This surfer girl who rides her bike to Ditch Plains and enjoys eating breakfast at John's Pancake House and dinner at The Dock for its "awesome nachos," says her life hasn't changed too much since the shoot. Most likely due to the fact people haven't seen the four photos of her — standing on a surfboard, leaning over a surfboard in the water, standing on the beach and lying on a towel next to a surfboard during a bonfire — yet.

But don't expect to see crude photos in this Playboy Feature.

"I guess it's the type of pictures I take," Dweck said about creating nude shots that are artistic and not over the top. "To me, some of them seem like snapshots. I don't want to cross that line. This is the only line I know. Some people shoot exotic photos. That's not my thing."

Paying homage to fashion photographer Helmut Newtown, who photographed for Playboy in the 1970s, Dweck shot his images in black and white or with faded colors as a tribute to the old school style of Playboy photography. Dweck also didn't airbrush any of the photos. He said that it's the first time in years that Playboy will run untouched, natural photos.

"These girls, they're not perfect," Dweck said. "They're very real."

In order to get good looking pictures, Dweck said there needs to be an element of trust between the photographer and his subject, as if the photos were taken by friends.

"We booked out a hotel (Shepherds Neck Inn, now Solé East) in Montauk where it was only us together," he said. "You live with each other for a week and photograph what happens. When you put people together things happen and that's how I typically shoot."

Finding the comfort zone between himself and his subjects is important to Dweck, no matter who is modeling.

"I talk to actress Maria Bello, when I photograph her, the same way I talk to Jamie," Dweck said. "I'm interested in people's lives."

Dweck's approach to photography is similar to that of making a movie. To prepare for the shoot, he scouted locations and created a storyboard with 300 drawings. His shot locations included Camp Hero, South Lake, Turtle Cove, Montauk Lake, Fort Pond Bay, in town, at Ditch Plains and near Poles.

During the week-long shoot in late

Capote's Return

The Life and Times of Author Truman Capote in Bridgehampton

By T.J. Clemente

The wonderful sea breeze blows across the Hamptons every day. The sun rules this narrow strip of farmland inundated by multimillion-dollar homes. Lanes, Drives and Old Country Roads wind you through land with vistas no photo or painting can do justice. It was here that the tormented soul of Truman Capote sought solace, solitude and the company of close friends.

Over the bar at Bobby Van's is an old photo of Jim Jones, Truman, John Knowles and Willie Morris standing in front of the original Bobby Van's, which was located across the street from the present one. Back then, a barbershop occupied part of the location. Marty Trunzo, now 88 and still cutting hair in Sag Harbor, used to cut Howard Hughes' hair for twenty cents and a quarter tip there.

Born in New Orleans on September 30, 1924, Truman Streckfus Persons would be raised by his relatives in Alabama while his aunt Marie Rudisill became the "fruitcake lady" on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show. Truman would eventually take his stepfather's last name. During Johnny Carson's second marriage, Truman Capote had dinner with the legend and his wife sometimes three days a week in New York City. But it was Johnny's wife, Joanne Carson, who was to be his friend to the very end.

Truman Capote also befriended East Hampton native Lee Radziwill, Jackie Kennedy's sister. His list of female friends drew from a pool of all the wives of the most powerful and prominent men in the country, including CBS TV founder Bill Paley's wife, Babe Paley. He would drive from one mansion to another to hear the sad tales of divorce, deceit and loneliness while cocktailing privately with the wives of the rich and famous. Openly gay, Truman kept a property in Bridgehampton where he and his non-exclusive life partner, playwright Jack Dunphy, had separate homes.

THE HAMPTONS CLUB SCENE STEPS UP A NOTCH

By Sabrina C. Mashburn

It's Memorial Day weekend, 2007. You're standing shoulder to shoulder with some of the most cosmetically-enhanced and scantily-clad members of the Long Island Long Leg Convention, pushing and shoving their bodies up against the velvet rope, shouting out a name, tossing around a few thousand dollars and hoping to get to where a DJ is spinning the hottest beats of the summer for all the beautiful people to dance to. Once inside, you see faces from every fashion magazine, hear some of your favorite artists sing along, karaoke-style, to their big single and clink glasses with some of the most powerful people in every industry. And if you're at Stereo by the Beach, Dune or any of this year's other hot spots, when you exit the club you will be greeted by angry stiletto-wearers who just didn't make the cut and are now seething at the back door.

If this doesn't sound like the Hamptons club scene from the long gone days of Jet East and Conscience Point, think again. This year's club scene will be bigger and better than any others before it, as some of New York City's most illustrious clubs have moved out to the Hamptons for the season. As one reveler exclaimed, "It's like being able to go out in The City and then wake up at the beach!" If you love the nightlife, the Hamptons are the place to be.

So why is all this happening now? It's not as if the Hamptons just became a hot spot to party. After all, most of these clubs have moved in to remodeled versions of clubs that came before them. Flirt Lounge and Bistro replaced Resort. Stereo by The Sea, the Hamptons incarnation of Stereo, replaced Tavern. Pink Elephant replaced Cabana. WhiteHouse replaced C.P.I. Dune, the beach outpost of Marquee, replaced the Hamptons outpost of their New York City neighbor, Cane, which had replaced Jet East the

Hired in 1972 by Rolling Stone Magazine to cover the touring Rolling Stones, Truman and Mick Jagger argued and eventually went at it. Unable to write the story, Capote himself was interviewed about the tour and Rolling Stone ran that. Andy Warhol interviewed Truman. Another favorite story is how Andy Warhol came to paint a portrait of Truman. Usually receiving almost a million dollars per portrait, Warhol instead made the deal to have Truman write one article a month for his magazine. At first, Capote would basically be interviewed by Andy about something and the story would run, but after a short time, Capote was in front of a typewriter, banging out great articles for Warhol until the deal was done.

A public personality to the end of his life, Truman Capote was the ultimate guest at luncheons in the Hamptons. He eventually used the confidential information he learned at these intimate gatherings to write a piece for The New Yorker that burned many social bridges for him.

Truman at 22

Some say Capote was the queen of the bathhouse circuit in New York City, specializing in unaccomplished lovers. Yet, at the same time, he was on the arm of Katherine Graham for their famous "Black and White Balls" at the Plaza Hotel in New York, where guests had to wear black and white, as a reference to ink and paper. Invitations to this ball were exclusive.

After many successes, like his award-winning novel, In Cold Blood, Truman Capote drowned in his own success. In the process, he would beach himself long enough to make a splash here and there. In his decline, Truman was not glamorous or productive. Joanne Carson took him in and nursed him in his final years. He died in her home on August 25, 1984 at the age of 59. The cause of death was "liver disease complicated by phlebitis." At first, he was interned at Westwood Village Memorial Park Cemetery in Los Angeles. However, when his longtime partner in life, Jack Dunphy, died twelve years later, Truman's remains where brought back to the East End and mixed together with the ashes of Jack Dunphy. Their ashes were then scattered at Crooked Pond, located between Bridgehampton and Sag Harbor.

There are so many souls that must dance in the ocean breeze of the summer season of the Hamptons. In fact, it was Truman Capote who called the Hamptons, "Kansas with a sea breeze." The dance is done by those so very alive and those deceased, who come back to their heaven on earth.

Who's Here

Frank MacNamara
President, Southampton Polo

By Sabrina C. Mashburn

It's hard to imagine summer in the Hamptons without the big white tents of weekly polo matches, the pounding of hooves and the exciting smash of a goal-scoring mallet and ball. However, before 1989, the only polo players in the Hamptons were embroidered on Ralph Lauren polo shirts. The man to thank for the arrival of this exciting facet of Hamptons summer life had never mounted a horse before then and had not even thought of playing polo before his wife, an avid equestrian, took up the sport. That man is Frank MacNamara and the club he started with his wife and their friends, the Southampton Hunt & Polo Club, has grown to be "probably the largest polo club in America," according to Frank. What started as a gathering of a few of Frank's closest polo-playing friends has blossomed into a beautiful stable with more than 200 horses and three playing fields where young colts and rescued horses are trained for their careers as top-notch polo ponies.

One of Frank's favorite aspects of the training component is the club's ability to rescue horses bound for slaughter and give them the chance to become "made" polo ponies. "We just brought in two horses off the track and they are going to be polo ponies," explains Frank. "They came from the Thoroughbred Retirement Foundation. Hopefully, in the next week or so, we'll get two more from them." The Thoroughbred Retirement Foundation is a horse rescue that takes in all registered thoroughbreds when their owners no longer want them. The Southampton Hunt & Polo Club's first adopted horse, Belle, came from a slightly different but no less hopeless background. Frank explained that, "she is what we call a Premarin foal." Premarin was a fertility drug made from the urine of pregnant mares. Since the mares used to make the drug had to be pregnant, thousands of foals were born with nowhere to go but the slaughterhouse. Frank adopted Belle, a registered Paint, when she was just a baby and immediately put her in training with a "horse whisperer" named Brad who was the trainer at the Southampton Hunt & Polo Club at the time. "He would take 45 minutes just to get her used to having one foot in the stirrup. It was amazing to watch him work with her." Now, "the horse can walk across wooden slats with just a lead rope on." And while she is playing polo, "she doesn't flinch or change the position of her head, even when a ball is coming straight at her." And the most miraculous part of the story? "She literally just graduated last year as a polo pony." Success stories like these are testaments to the effectiveness of Frank's methods when training his ponies. His patience and understanding are also evident when he trains his players, from the most novice players to those looking to brush up on their game.

Patrons of five out of the six teams at the Bridgehampton Polo Club are members of the Southampton Club.

Frank's player-training program is also unique. "The whole program can be completed in a week," says Frank. "The idea behind the ten-hour introductory program is that, after ten hours, the students should be able to safely play in a game against other beginners." Although, "to play in other more advanced chukkas takes about two years." One of the most exciting aspects of the novice-training program that Frank did not anticipate was the formation of the new Women's League. "Polo has always been considered a man's sport," explained Frank. "But this year, we have had nineteen beginners and sixteen of them were women." As a result, "this year, for the first time, on the Fourth of July, we are having our first Ladies' League." This is unique in that, most of the time, "the matches are mixed."

When asked if the Southampton Hunt & Polo Club and the Bridgehampton Polo Club, based at Two Trees Farms, are ever in competition, Frank explained that his club has an entirely different purpose than the Bridgehampton Polo Club. "The Bridgehampton Polo Club is really professional polo and represents the best polo you can see in America. Three quarters of the players there are superb, world-class players. Our polo is strictly club polo and recreational polo." The Southampton Hunt & Polo Club is also a year-round event, with matches in Florida during the winter season, while the matches at the Bridgehampton club are only held on weekends in July and August. The result has been that "the Patrons of five out of the six teams at the Bridgehampton Polo Club are members" of the Southampton Hunt & Polo Club. That means that no matter how well the Patron's professional teams play, the real score is settled on the fields of Southampton. Even David Walentas, the owner of Two Trees Farms, is a player at the Southampton Polo Club. This friendly competition is the highlight of many Hamptons-goers' summers, yet, as Frank explained, "years ago, the Group for the South Fork said we were 'recreating on agricultural land.'" Luckily, after seven years of exile on the

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion Rattiner

The Van

It's true: your appearance has a lot to do with how people treat you. Especially in Sagaponack.

On Sunday, I spent nearly the entire day Spring-cleaning my house/condo/amazing Ditch Plains (okay, screw you) eh hem, trailer, in Montauk. It was pretty awful. I had managed to borrow a van and also rounded up a troop to help with the piles of crap that I have accumulated over the past year. It's embarrassing how much garbage I've allowed into my house. "Hey Dave, I have this dresser, would you like it?"

"Sure!"

"Hey Dave, I have this mangled bicycle, perhaps it would make a nice decoration in your house?"

"Thanks pal!"

All things of this nature were getting shipped out to the dump, and I was not a happy camper. My friend TJ and I got dressed up in our dirty wear. I threw on a guido-esque, oil-stained, white tank top, blue jeans and Yankees cap. I don't remember how TJ was dressed. I don't check out other men.

Okay, he was also dressed like he just crawled out from under a hole. We looked like a paesan and goomba, with Long Island Jewish accents.

The two of us loaded up the van and headed to the dump. Once we were finished throwing everything away, I suddenly realized that I no longer have a couch in my house. And so, I did what any normal local would do. I went yard sailing.

Of course, it wasn't until Sagaponack that I saw a sign for a yard sale. "Holy crap!!! There is a yard sale in Sagaponack! This is going to be unbelievable."

"Dude, we should not walk around Sagaponack dressed like this. Especially driving in a van. Somebody is going to call the police on us."

"TJ, do you have any idea how amazing a yard sale in Sagaponack is? These people don't care, they just want to get rid of their stuff for new stuff. I could redecorate my whole place because of this luck."

I followed the sign, ripped the van around and zoomed into the $1 million per square yard piece of real estate and yard sale heaven that is Sagaponack. But to my despair, the signs kept leading me to empty roads with no yard sales. I kept doing U-turns and was driving up and down Main Street. I was getting frustrated and worried. It was pushing 5 p.m. now.

"I'm going to ask somebody if they know where it is," I said and I pulled the van up next to a woman jogging. There we were, two men, weighing 200 lbs each, driving sleeveless in a van in Sagaponack, asking this handsome female jogger where a yard sale was. You can guess how this went. "Hey, excuse me, Miss?"

She peripheral-visioned me and then sped up and turned hard down Beech Street.

I wasn't about to give up just yet. I was just imagining Martha Stewart standing outside on a lawn with a brand new couch set just waiting for me to take it off her hands.

"Maybe it's over here."

I turned into the private community known to surfers as the Georgica Estates. Within minutes, an old man pulled up to me in a Mercedes. "You guys need help?"

"Yes, I'm looking for the yard sale."

"Well there isn't one in here. This is a private community and I don't want you here," and

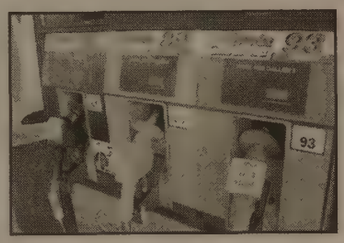
Thiele (R-Sag Harbor). And you can ask him how that turned out. He's still our Assemblyman.

The basic idea, of course, is that the price of gas ought to be the same wherever you go on Long Island. The original story I heard was that the retailers just threw their hands up when asked about it and said they were at the mercy of the wholesalers. The wholesalers said they were at the mercy of the truckers. And the truckers said, well, the problem was in Texas, or, later, in Alaska, or, later, in Saudi Arabia. One time, I actually stopped a trucker on the highway and asked him about it.

"It's how far you drive from the storage tanks," he told me. "There's none out east, so we have to charge more the farther away from it we get. It's all printed up in a rule book."



"But Montauk is just eighteen miles further out than East Hampton," I said.

"You're holding me up," he said, revving his engine. "It's also based on time. So if it's fewer miles but windier roads, it's more. If people stopped accosting us and let us do this job, we'd take less time, use less gasoline and we could get on with it."

He shifted into a forward gear. I stepped aside.

In more recent times, I have heard that the gas companies charge more in wealthy areas than in poor areas. Or that they can charge whatever the hell they want, wherever the hell the want.

This morning, I heard a commercial on WINS News Radio brought to us by the American Oil Industry Association, during which they said, among other things, that the outdated laws placed on oil companies in the 1970s were crippling them and that we should urge our congressmen to have them repealed.

One of the laws they wanted repealed involves government regulation of oil prices. •

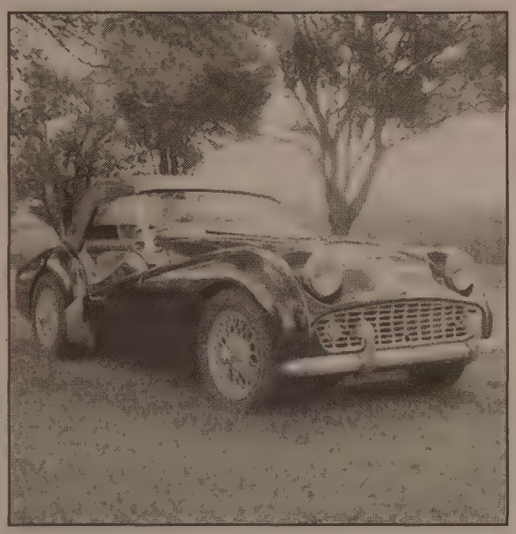
there and that person has to sit sideways, with his or her shoes on the plank. There is no seatbelt for either of the front seats, no airbags, no antilock brakes, no 2 1/2 m.p.h., springing front and back bumpers, nothing. Hit anything and you're dead.

So you drive slow, for two reasons. One is that something might break if you drive fast. The other is that you might hit something if you drive fast. And you are not, in the 21st century, going to easily find a replacement part for something that was made in 1959.

And this leads me to the first of the many joys of owning this car. One is the insurance rate. I pay $96 a YEAR for insurance on my 1959 TR-3. The actuaries who establish the rates at the insurance companies have discovered that people with these old sports cars almost NEVER get into accidents. So it's $96 a year. The next joy is how you start the car. You open the hood and check its fluids. Brake fluid. Oil. Water. If anything is low, you fill it up. You're ready. You close the hood. Get behind the wheel. Pump the gas ten times to prime the engine, pull out the choke all the way, push in the starter button and say a little prayer. The starter motor might make a click and then a whine, so try it again. Usually, the second time, it turns over and over and over and, after a while, the engine responds by firing up. It makes a big racket. Everybody cheers. Smoke comes out of the exhaust pipe and there is this wonderful smell of oil and gas that fills the garage and reminds you of a time long ago when garages smelled like this.



It's working. Life is good. It also reminds some people of what you have to go through to start a small airplane.

And so you depress the clutch, shift into reverse, back out of the garage, go to neutral, then to first and you are off. There is no synchromesh in the transmission, so you cannot slow down and have the gears automatically change at certain speeds. You do it yourself, depressing the clutch and jerking the floor-mounted gearshift this way and that to get it in sync enough to change gears without grinding the transmission. It's an art. And soon, when you get to about 35 miles per hour, you are in your top gear and it just winds out in that gear until it is going as fast as it can go.

I know how fast it can go. One night, about 1981, at one in the morning, I had a fight with my girlfriend. She ran out of the house, slammed the door and drove off toward New York City. I followed in the TR-3. We went through downtown East Hampton, Bridgehampton and Southampton, I was keeping up with her at about 75 miles-per-hour and then we got out on County Road 39 and Sunrise Highway and she opened up. She was driving, at that time, a black, brand-new 6-cylinder Chevy Chevette with a sunroof. Not a big deal of a car. And I kept up with her as she accelerated past the Shinnecock Canal at 85-miles-per-hour. Then, at Hampton Bays, at 95, she just pulled away and disappeared ahead of me into the darkness.

The TR-3 was wide open, roaring away at 88 miles-per-hour. And that was it. It was trying and almost succeeding in breaking the sound barrier, had there been one, at 88 miles-per-hour. There were no police around. But I knew this baby was about to blow. And so I slowed down, then turned around and, sadly, went back through the darkness toward home.

"Way to go girl," I said to the car. "You did the best that you could."

The girlfriend came back in the morning. Later, we married. Then, eight years later, divorced. But that's another story.

No. I would never part with my Triumph TR-3.

Today, in her dotage, she still runs well, at low speeds anyway and I won't test her at anything over 55.

But she does tend to overheat after about ten minutes of driving. Then, for whatever reason, the oil pressure starts to drop, the water temperature starts to rise and, although it does level off at five pounds of pressure and about 385 degrees — still not in a danger zone — you begin to hear the clicking noise of the metal valves on the top of the engine not getting enough oil and if you ignore that, a sort of ominous banging noise begins and only God knows where it comes from.

The fair range of the TR-3 is, therefore, from East Hampton, where I live, to Bridgehampton or Water Mill on the west and perhaps LUNCH and Cyril's Bar on the Napeague Stretch to the east. I go to people's homes in it. I take it to where valet parkers are and won't let them drive it, but they say just park it right here so we can look at it and we'll take good care of it, and I take the key and then give them a few bucks at the end of the evening for watching it.

But no, you won't find me in Montauk or anywhere further west than Southampton in the TR-3, unless I stop halfway there for half an hour to let her cool down and then do it again on the way back.

Sell her? Never. I hope to be buried sitting upright behind the wheel in the driver's seat. • about $50,000. Sounds more like a relaxing, upscale resort to me — just what the Hamptons need.

Mr. Lohan hopes to use the Southampton facility to help people like his daughter. He said, "When Lindsay puts God back in her life, things will turn around." And it's no secret that she certainly needs the help. This past Memorial Day weekend was memorable for many of us, but Lindsay probably didn't remember most of it, as hers went something like this:

After a long night of partying, at about 5:30 a.m. Saturday morning, Lindsay crashed her 2005 black SL-65 Mercedes into a curb and a tree on Sunset Boulevard in West Hollywood. She then fled the scene and was later arrested for being under the influence of alcohol. To make matters worse, police found "a usable amount of cocaine" in her car. The next night, instead of laying low, Lindsay was photographed in a friend's car, passed out, mouth hanging open with a hood over her head as she left a bar in Hollywood. Maybe she was sleeping, but ironically, an Alcoholics Anonymous "30 days sober" chip dangled from the car's mirror. Perhaps she didn't understand that those medallions represent 30 days sober IN A ROW. Regardless, Lindsay ended the holiday weekend on Monday by checking herself into the Promises treatment facility in Malibu, California, for the second time in six months. It has been reported that her 21st birthday party, scheduled for July 2 — just days after she would leave rehab — at the nightclub Pure in Las Vegas, will go on no matter what happens while she is at Promises. Her lawyer released a statement, "part of sobriety is that you can go out into normal society and just go out. Who says you can't move your booty on the dance floor?"

Lindsay Lohan

You can't make this stuff up.

Mr. Lohan has been very public about his concern for Lindsay, especially after this recent, highly publicized mess she's gotten herself into. He encourages her to cut out all the enablers in her life — friends, lawyers, assistants, managers — and, of course, find God. It seems a little too convenient that this notoriously fame-hungry father released plans for the Southampton treatment facility just days after his daughter entered rehab, but I hope his efforts are genuine. If Promises doesn't work out, maybe Lindsay will take an extended vacation to the East End.

and then eviscerated and de-gutted right in front of women and children and so forth. The Humane Society missed the fact that high school biology teachers in the area sometimes take students down to the docks to watch fish of all sorts, not just sharks, be cleaned and prepared for market.

As for the Town Supervisor, he says he will issue the permits. He says he understands their concerns, but there are plenty of other government bodies that regulate the numbers of fish caught and he hasn't heard from any of them about shark fishing. The fact is that when a particular fishery declines, the catching of that fish is limited by the authorities until the stocks can revive. Then it is once again open season.

I think there ought to be a public hearing about all of this. Not for humans. For sharks. I suggest that a sign be posted underwater on a coral reef off in the ocean somewhere inviting all sharks to come into Montauk Harbor on a particular day at a particular time to listen to what the Humane Society has to say about killing and eating.

Mr. Grandy and some of the others from the Humane Society could then be lowered into the water — they won't be heard above water — to explain their position to the sharks and describe to them just how much better off they will be, emotionally, physically and mentally, with these shark tournaments shut down. •

September, the models and a crew of about twenty people woke up at 4:30 every morning and ended their day around 11 p.m. Dweck shot about a thousand photos a day.

"The light in Montauk is the prettiest I've ever seen," Dweck said. "That's probably why De Kooning and Warhol loved it. These pictures are warm because of that light."

Dweck said it was a dream come true working with Playboy.

"It's kind of an honor when they come to you and give you carte blanche and say you can do anything you want," Dweck said. "Complete freedom to photograph what you want, that's very rare today. That's why Helmut Newton's images are so strong."

With his first Playboy experience completed, Dweck said he is in the process of talking about a new project with the magazine.

Jamie

Meanwhile, Jamie has already worked with Playboy a second time. She was chosen as a model in "Playboy's Best-Dressed Man on Campus" shot by Nigel Barker. Barker is best known as being a judge on the television show, "America's Next Top Model."

As excited as Playboy's faithful (Playboy sells around three million copies in the United States each month) will be to see Dweck's interpretation of "The Girls of Montauk," Jamie says she doesn't want to know who's looking at the pictures.

"I try to avoid thinking of that," Jamie said. "It's kind of, not creepy, but I don't want to know."

Even with her modeling career thriving, Jamie said it's not her main priority. But she knows she'll be proud of her work when she looks back on her modeling days.

"It's definitely a great experience," Jamie said. "You can show your kids in 20 years and say, 'Look kids, mommy was hot!'"

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

The Sheltered Islander #450
Paris in June

Well, today's the big day, the day we've all been worried about. Paris Hilton starts her twenty-one-day jail sentence for driving drunk without a license while having her license suspended for driving drunk without a license. I've been up all night worrying about her. Since we lost Anna Nicole, it falls upon Paris to be our official worthless celebrity hussy. Her every move must be documented and reported to keep us from stressful news like the increased US naval maneuvers in the gulf guarding the increased exports of Iraqi oil by Halliburton/Exxon. Lite and trite beats might and fight when it comes to news broadcasting.

Thinking about the punishment Paris has to endure got me to thinking. Shelter Island is always looking for ways to increase revenues. What if we ran a Sheltered Celebrity Shelter? Then important celebrities could do their "time" here and we wouldn't even have to build a separate building for them, just assign them to live with a local family.

"You have to get up, Paris."

"What? It's only 7 a.m.!"

"Yea, but it's summertime. We have to get to the IGA by 8:30 to get a good parking spot and get out while it's still cool. The cool only lasts until 10 a.m. We gotta shop, get home and unpack the groceries."

"Why don't we go tonight, if you're so worried about the heat?"

"IGA closes at 6 p.m."

"So we'll go somewhere else."

"Nowhere to go. It's the only grocery store on the Island. Except for Fedi's, which is our version of 7/11, but it closes at 7 p.m."

"How can you live here?"

"After we bring in the groceries and unpack, we have to organize the garbage and recycle."

"What do you mean, 'organize the garbage?'"

"We have to separate all the recyclables — glass, plastics, paper — from the non-recyclable garbage."

"That's so sick. Can't the garbage men separate that stuff at the curb when they pick it up?"

"There's no garbage pick up here."

"What? How do you get rid of your garbage?"

"We take it all to the dump ourselves and put all the recycling in the appropriate bins. It's very exciting. You meet everybody at the dump and get to talk to lots of people."

"Ewww! That is whack! Tell me the truth, I'm in hell aren't I?"

"And the non-recyclable garbage has to be bagged in special yellow Town Bag that we buy at the store."

"Why does your garbage need to be in special bags?"

Dental Implants - The Most Beautiful Smile Regain The Confidence Of Natural Teeth

HAVE YOU LOST OR ARE YOU LOSING YOUR TEETH?

If so, you may be a candidate for Dental Implants.

At the offices of DR. HOWARD A. POPPER we have placed thousands of implants since 1985, including Long Island's FIRST "Teeth in an Hour." THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR EXPERIENCE.

Your life can be dramatically transformed with the immediate load – immediate function – immediate smile procedure utilizing THE NEW NOBELGUIDE FOR COMPUTER-GUIDED, minimally invasive, flapless, pain free implant surgery. Dental implants improve appearance, comfort, speech, confidence, self-esteem and maintain your bone for a lifetime. Dental implants contribute to better overall health and improved quality of life for patients.

Before The Happy Patient!

Teeth in an Hour, the latest concept in High-Tech dentistry. Sophisticated 3-D radiology creates precise imaging of patient's jaw, and robotic technology in Sweden fabricates the permanent restoration which is placed with the Branemark System Implants - in the space of one hour.

The Immediate Load and the New ALL-ON-4 procedure can provide patients with low cost acrylic bridges all in one day.

Implants can secure dentures, restore chewing and enjoyment of food, and impede progressive jawbone loss. No more wobbling dentures, irritated gums, gooey adhesives and filed-down teeth for bridgework. Single teeth to full mouth treatment, utilizing NOBELPERFECT IMPLANTS for optimum esthetics.

year before. Sean Gallagher, hairstylist to the stars — Giselle Bundchen, Petra Nemcova, Adriana Lima, Jessica and Ashlee Simpson, just to name a few — and one of New York City's top club promoters explained why New York City clubs have taken over the East End this year. "To really exist [as a successful club,]" he said, "you need to be more than a nightclub." A club needs to be a brand. And to succeed as a brand, it needs to promote its name, its logo, its style — and follow its customers. "When there are events around the country, [the clubs] try to get their brand out there. Marquee throws parties at Sundance, Pink Elephant is opening up in Chicago, and a lot of clubs want to be in Vegas." And every one of them wants to be in the Hamptons.

Stereo by the Sea

Each club has a team of marketing and PR representatives behind them, as well as sponsors who provide the funding clubs need to send their top people all over the country to sell the brand and ensure that no matter which incarnation of the club you visit, you will have a similar experience. These sponsors are usually luxury alcohol companies like Hennessey and Level vodka, but they can be as seemingly unrelated to the nightlife as car companies such as Cadillac — which is the reason every club parking lot in the Hamptons is crawling with Escalades. This symbiotic relationship fortifies the club's brand by allowing them to branch out across the country and fortifies the sponsor's brand in New York City, a notoriously hard city to win over with traditional advertising methods.

The promoters are an instrumental part of this courtship between customer and brand. It is their job to ensure that the people who are spending thousands of dollars to sit at a table in these clubs get the experience they are paying for. The clubs usually provide their best promoters with summer houses — which the promoters then fill with models and their beautiful friends — and vans or SUVs with drivers, to ensure that the beautiful people get to the club every night unharmed. Most promoters, therefore, have jobs that enable them to make connections to beautiful people wherever they go. Gallagher explained that, when he works on a photo shoot or styles hair for fashion shows in Bryant Park, "it does nothing but strengthen the brand." In return, these beautiful people get to party as much as they want, anywhere they want, usually free of charge. "My clients from the salon will text me when they're coming out." When he responds, Sean tells them where the parties are. Other people Sean works with at Hamptons clubs are fashion designers, film producers and screenwriters, who all provide the club with access to Hollywood's brightest stars.

Of course, the success of the Hamptons club outposts is not solely based on the prowess of the promoters. Both Sean Gallagher and Hamptons celebrity DJ Joel Rodney (a.k.a. DJ Biggie) commented that the appeal of the beach and the unseasonably beautiful weather over Memorial Day weekend got the clubbing season off to a wildly successful start. No one at any of the clubs was prepared for the surge of bodies that would be pushing against the ropes in front

BREAKING NEWS

AWOL Soldier Stopped on Route 48

By Brittany Allen

Iraq War veteran Christopher Henessy, 27, of Riverhead, was arrested during a routine traffic stop after the police officer discovered he was AWOL for desertion.

Henessy was pulled over early Sunday morning on Route 48 in Cutchogue after he was spotted driving erratically by a police officer at 1:17 a.m. After entering Henessy's name into a computer database, the officer discovered that Henessy had a suspended license and registration, along with a felony warrant for his arrest issued by the United States Army.

Henessy explained to the officer that he had been in the army for seven years, including time in Iraq, earning a Purple Heart. Henessy was issued tickets for driving with a suspended license and an unregistered vehicle and was held on the warrant at the Southold police station. Military officers from Brooklyn retrieved Henessy on Sunday night for extradition to Fort Knox, Tenn.

The United States army classifies soldiers as AWOL — absent without official leave — when soldiers leave their post for more than 30 days. AWOL offenses are handled by the military through court-martial, discharge, rehabilitation or administrative punishment.

BONACKERS WIN L.I. CLASS A SOFTBALL TITLE

Photos By Justin DeMarco

By Justin DeMarco

A sea of maroon shirted parents and fans lined the eastbound shoulder of Montauk Highway early Tuesday evening eagerly awaiting the arrival of the yellow East Hampton school bus carrying the women's softball Long Island Class A Champions.

Blaring horns and loud roars alerted the crowd the bus was on its way into Wainscott, as it passed the Saracen sign. The Bonackers' players screamed and waved to the fans as the bus driver pulled over onto the shoulder. A police officer then temporarily stopped traffic to allow the school bus to be escorted back to East Hampton High School. A red fire truck with its siren on and lights flashing led the way as the bus merged back onto the road. Fans with "Bonac Softball 2007 Long Island Champs" or other variations signifying the victory written on their rear glass windows joined the procession that was anchored by police trucks.

The celebration continued at the high school. With smiles on their faces and arms around one another swaying back and forth in a circle, the softball team sang along to Dean Martin's "That's Amore" blasting from a car stereo.

"Every year down in Florida we find a song we click with," winning pitcher Jessie Stavola said, noting "It's a Small World" was last year's song. "We just find a song that's unique and no one else has."

The team has come a long way since spring training in Florida, amassing a 24-1 record on the year, en route to the Southeast Regional Finals in Binghamton after defeating Clarke 2-1 in the Long Island Class A Championship game played at the Town of Brookhaven Bellport Park.

In the top of the sixth inning with East Hampton leading 2-0 thanks to a first inning run scored by third baseman Nicole Fierro on a passed ball and right fielder Devin O'Brien reaching the plate on an error in the fifth, Clarke started a rally. With two outs and runners on second and third, Stavola threw a pitch that was hit and floating towards centerfield. It looked as if the ball was going to fall in for a single.

"I was hoping we'd just get away with the tying run scoring," Coach Lou Reale said he was thinking at the time.

East Hampton centerfield Molly Nolan sprawled out and made a diving catch, keeping Clarke scoreless and the Bonackers still in control of the Long Island Championship.

"I knew she had it," Stavola said. "Being a freshman and making a catch like that in the Long Island Championship, I'm so proud of

President Jimmy Carter made an exception to the rule and, in order to bolster the Shah, ordered 80 of the planes to be shipped to him. They arrived with a full complement of spare parts, operation manuals and about 100 trainers and mechanics from Grumman in Riverhead to instruct the Shah's air force on how to use them.

They never completed their mission. Five months after their arrival, the Shah was overthrown in a bloody military coup and forced to flee into exile. At the main Iranian airbase outside of Tehran, the Grumman workers were evacuated by C-47s, taking as many parts as they could carry. They never returned.

From that day to this, the Iranians have never been able to use the F-14s for the purpose they were intended. There have been a few instances where Iranian pilots were able to get them up into the air and fly them around. But, apparently, they have never been able to figure out how to work the sophisticated armaments. Several F-14s have crashed. There were cases of Iranians being executed for either stealing parts off F-14s to sell them (back to the United States?) or for damaging the aircraft. Death was the penalty for damaging government property, unless a man or his family could scrape up the money to repair the damage. One man accidentally set off a pilot's ejection seat while in the cockpit and, though he parachuted to earth safely, he was arrested upon landing and ultimately had to pay the supreme penalty.

How many Iranian F-14s are operational after all these years is not known but it is thought that the number is fewer than 10. At this point, however, what with the present Iranian government developing Atomic bombs and other weapons, an effort is apparently being made to get those F-14s flying again.

At the present time, except for two American squadrons that remain in service, all remaining F-14s are being handed over to a company called Government Liquidations Inc., which is in charge of dismantling the aircraft and destroying the remains. The problem, however, is that Government Liquidations, in making it's contract with the government, got the government to agree that, under certain circumstances, individual planes and spare parts could escape the crusher if they were to be used by air show operators, museum owners or antique collectors. By the time the paperwork for this part of the contract got down the government food chain, the ultimate document only contained the caveat that parts or whole airplanes could be sold as long as the buyer signed a form promising that they would not sell any parts of an F-14 to any foreign government.

In discovering the crates of F-14 parts in Abib's possession, however, government investigators determined, by looking at the serial numbers of these parts, that they had arrested somebody else a few years ago for trying to sell exactly these particular parts. Somehow, after that arrest and conviction, the parts had gone around and come around and now here is Tabib, trying to ship them.

Maybe the Iranians intend to use these parts, some others, and a bit of tape, chicken wire and scotch tape to fashion something that could carry an A-bomb. •

"The sale of the bags pays for the operation of the dump."

"Can't the bags pay for garbage men too?"

"No. Then we'd have to charge more and the bags are pricey enough as it is."

"When my father sends my money, I'll buy you a garbage truck. Wake me when the mail comes."

"No mail delivery, Paris. We all pick up our mail at the Post Office. We do that after the dumps. We'll run into the same group at the Post Office as at the dumps because we all do things in a pattern and we all empty the garbage out of our cars before we pick up packages."

"Great, I'm doing time in Green Acres. Well, after the shopping and the dumps and the Post Office, can we at least go shopping?"

"Sure! We have a few stores."

"How few is few?"

"Umm, Cornucopia, Bliss' and Jack's Marina."

"How many floors in Cornucopia?"

"One. One floor, one room."

"Which is the shoe store?"

"Well, Bliss' has Topsiders."

"Topsiders? Are they Italian?"

"No, practical."

"Did you say a marina?"

"Yes, Jack's has marine supplies and toys, puzzles, and games."

"Of course! When I think 'toys,' I always think, 'marina.' I'm going to need to hit a good liquor store tonight and get some tequila after today."

"Both liquor stores close by 7 PM. Who are you calling on your cell?"

"My lawyer. Shhhh. Hi, this is Paris. Get me off this island that time forgot! Get me in a real jail, puhleez!"

"Oh, Paris, don't go. It's not so bad once you get used to it."

"Why would I want to get used to this? You people are insane!"

"No, but it helps."

before I could give him the finger, he sped off.

I was feeling pretty defeated and also unwelcome, and then another woman went by us and I was filled with glory. "Miss? Do you know where the yard sale is?"

She took off her iPod buds, "Why yes I do..." She smiled and ran off. What a wonderful human being.

I pulled into the Sagaponack estate to find remnants of a yard sale. There were maybe two things out on the lawn, the rest, I guessed, were hidden inside of a garage.

"They're closed, dude, I can see everything is under the tarp, let's go," TJ said.

"I'm going to knock on the door."

As I approached the door, I imagined a Charlton Heston/Hugh Hefner type of guy answering it with a giant 12-gauge shotgun asking me what the hell I was doing on his property with the 12-gauge pointed right at my head. After all, this was the country and TJ was right, I didn't look like your typical Sagaponackian.

I got an adrenaline rush. I'm risking my life for a cheap couch, I thought. God, I'm such a Jew.

But the woman that answered my knock was wonderful and nice. She was a middle-aged woman dressed in a bathrobe, looking as if she just got out of the shower. I introduced myself and explained why I was dressed poorly and the ordeal I just went through to get to her yard sale and she smiled, "You just missed it, we have some other things that we were going to sell tomorrow, but now everything has been moved into the garage. I looked at the garage with my imaginary x-ray vision and I saw the living room set, I saw a new bathroom, I saw a king size bed. "I'll be back," I said, Terminator 2 style, and waved goodbye.

As I left, I lost my balance and accidentally landed on the lawn, but then immediately jumped back onto the walkway.

"It's so nice to see a young man that was raised right." She said to me.

I smiled and walked off and decided then and there that the people of Sagaponack are wonderful.

"OLD SCHOOL HAMPTONS"

The twenty-year-old landmark club, which anchored the infamous "Tavern" sign in Southampton on Tuckahoe Lane, is visible off of Montauk Highway and now reads, "Stereo By The Shore." Club financiers Michael Satsky and Barry Mullineaux are the proud owners of SBTS and poured more than one million dollars into club renovations. "The Old Tavern didn't have palm trees, so I had to bring in thirty palms. The ceilings were raised, the walls were knocked down, the colors changed, the outside cabanas are different, and nothing is really the same," shared Satsky. Now, you may find some of the same crowd from Stereo's Manhattan club, but SBTS has a mission according to Satsky, "We intend to bring back the old Hamptons. New York City, young Hollywood, it's that formula."

Michael Satsky, Bobby Brown and Barry Mullineaux

Satsky revealed his take on old school Hamptons, "The Hampton veterans, people that have houses here, have always had houses here, and don't go out unless it's a good reason, I personally know them, they're recognizable by name and face and when they're in a room everybody recognizes, and that's really what's happening here."

On opening weekend, Saturday night the VIP area was literally overflowing with Victoria's Secret Supermodels including Alessandra Ambrosio, who was celebrating Ana Beatriz Barios and Fernanda Motta's Birthdays. Across the VIP room, self-proclaimed "Queen of all Media," Perez Hilton was lounging in a banquette, just waiting for a drop of celebrity gossip, "I love celebrities, because they're crazy," he snarled. Hilton's website receives more than 5 million hits a day, and has become a credible news source for entertainment shows worldwide. Hilton revealed to me what happens when he actually comes face to face with celebrities that he has literally scribbled on.

Perez laughed, "I run!" How does Perez sleep at night? "The most important thing for me is I don't care, I don't care what anybody thinks, I don't care what anybody says. I just have fun." Hilton's message to celebrity prey, "I'm never wrong. Don't read my website if Eastern Long Island is a special place, blessed by a long growing season, ample rain and sun. The bounty of the East End is legendary. 150 years ago New York City restaurants boasted about our oysters and clams. Fish, duck, fruits, vegetables, wines and more, it's all here. At Tweed's we make every effort to use local products when ever possible. First because it is better, but importantly, this selection supports the local economy which in turn supports and preserves a way of life that we treasure.

for bidding. The majority of the bidders are not devout collectors, but host an isolated desire to "someday own that 1969 Mercedes 280SL."

The market value of a classic car varies in different parts of the country or, for that matter, parts of the world. For example, certain vintage automobiles command a greater market value anywhere southwest of Chicago and even greater value in Western Europe. Interestingly, at present, the most vigorous market for certain rare classic autos exists in Japan. Cosmopolitan regions also significantly affect market values — auction sales that occur in proximity to large cities average approximately 20 percent higher than those that take place in rural areas.

Mr. Mole has set the bidders' registration at $75.00. The sales commission to the auction organization derives from the buyer as well as the seller — 5 percent is paid by the former and 10 percent by the latter. The sellers incur another fee to register their vehicles for auction: $250.00 if they avail the automobile without a reserve (a reserve is a minimum bid required to sell the vehicle), and $500.00 if the autos sell with a reserve.

Mr. Mole anticipates approximately 75 cars registered for auction, including a Mini-Cooper Traveler of the sixties vintage owned by Matt Lauer, the news anchor. The roster of vehicles will most probably include a blend of American and European classics, ranging in average value between $10,000 and $250,000.

The auction and the Concours d'Elegance will take place on the fields of the Hayground school, located on Mitchell Lane in Bridgehampton. Kensington Motor Group will donate a percentage of the show's proceeds to Habitat for Humanity, an organization that builds houses for underprivileged families.

The judging will take place at 1:00 p.m. Sunday. Princess Yasmin Khan, Rita Hayworth's daughter, will present the awards. The Princess will host a cocktail reception at the conclusion of the awards ceremony inside the tent. Everyone may attend. Admission to the cocktail party is $125.00. Proceeds from ticket sales will also be donated to charity. The admission cost for auction spectators is $15.00, and $25.00 for the Concours d'Elegance. For additional information, contact Kensington Motor Group at (631) 537-1868.

Announcing a new summer grant program for East End nature and wildlife preserves and conservancies

If your nonprofit organization is looking for summer funding for projects promoting coastal biodiversity, preserving the integrity of the natural ecosystem, or protecting endangered species, submit your application now to 2007grant@rarewildflower.org (deadline June 30, 2007).

The Brine Family Trust is seeking grant proposals from East End Long Island nonprofits for programs devoted to nature and wildlife conservancy. The Trust will fund projects that serve to reclaim and maintain the natural ecosystems of East End's ocean habitats, bays, beaches and flats, estuaries, streams, creeks, shorelines, and tidal wetlands. 2007 grant awards range from $4,000 to $29,000.

East End Long Island summer support 2007 grant award levels

Organizations applying for an award are encouraged to apply for the cash grant award level justified by the project's requirements. Five grants will be awarded: $29,000, $18,000, $11,000, $7,000, and $4,000. Only seek funds for projects that can reasonably be completed in 2007–2008. Grants are awarded based on need. Allocation of administrative overhead is limited to 7 percent of project budget.

Some of the East End's endangered or at-risk species

The Fin Whale There are approximately 200–400 fin whales in the waters of New York. The fin whale is the most abundant large baleen whale in the Long Island region. They are the second largest species of whale and the second largest animal ever to have lived. An endangered species since the inception of the U.S. Endangered Species Act of 1970, the fin whales face a high risk of extinction in the wild. Photo: A. H. Kopelman for CRESLI

The Roseate Tern The East End of Long Island has one of the two largest roseate tern colonies in the Western Hemisphere. The colony located at Great Gull Island off eastern Long Island has more than 1,000 pairs. Photo: National Audubon Society

The Sandplain Gerardia The sandplain gerardia, the only federally endangered plant species in New York State is an extremely rare wildflower that only blooms for a day with pink or purple flowers. Long Island has six of the ten world populations of the sandplain gerardia in the coastal grassland areas. Photo: Eleanor Saulys, CT Botanical Society

Grant recipients guidelines

Grants will be awarded to operating charitable foundations, preserves, conservancies and trusts with a history of achieving results on the East End of Long Island. To qualify for a grant the nonprofit is required to be a recognized 501(c)(3), established over three years ago, with a 2006 budget of $200,000 or more.

Grant-making cycle

The grant-making cycle is streamlined to provide funds for 2007 projects. To apply for a grant on behalf of your organization, follow the guidelines established below and e-mail us at 2007grant@rarewildflower.org. Please note, due to our staff size, we are unable to receive requests for proposals by post, or inquires by phone.

Grant-funding criteria

1. The project is worth doing
2. It can achieve results
3. The results can be measured
4. The project is well designed
5. The proposed budget is adequate

Grant timeline

1. Application deadline June 30, 2007.
Qualified 501(c)(3) non-profit organizations submit the proposal by e-mail to 2007grant@rarewildflower.org. The application should include your organization's name, address, phone number, 501(c)(3) tax ID number, mission statement, annual budget, number of full-time employees and a 1,500 word description of the proposed project with an itemized budget. Small targeted grant requests are encouraged.

2. Grant awards July 31, 2007.
All grantees will be notified of the 2007 award recipients by e-mail and cash awards processed. Each grantee organization will receive two-thirds of the award at the project inception and one-third at completion.

3. Interim project reports March 31, 2008.
Each awardee will submit interim written evaluation and digital-photo documentation of the project.

4. Final report June 30, 2008.
All awardees will submit final program report by e-mail, with project assessment and digital-photo documentation. After the final program report has been accepted and reviewed, the funds for the last third of the cash award will be released and processed. Final funds will not be released unless the final rreport is received by June 30, 2008.

5. Publication of the final report September 30, 2008.
The Brine Family Trust will e-publish a project report for the benefit of all organizations funded by the program. The report will include completed program evaluations and digital-photo documentation

Grant-administration protocols

The trust's goal is to effectuate a streamlined, grant-making process that is not administratively burdensome to grant-seeking participants. All communication will be conducted through e-mail at 2007grant@rarewildflower.org. Grant proposals are limited to 1,500 words. Notification of grant awards and cash funding will be timely. Two-thirds of the grant will be processed at the project inception and the last third on documentation of completion. An e-publication will be sent by the trust to all participating organizations.

About the Brine Family Charitable Trust

The Brine Family Charitable Trust was established in 1989 to support New York's medical, educational, cultural institutions. Over the past eighteen years the trust has supported projects on behalf of the Foundation for Children with Aids, the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York University, the Weill Cornell Medical Center, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the World Monument Fund, the Institute for International Cooperation, the Parks Council and others.

The 2007–2008 East End Long Island Summer Support Grant Program at 2007grant@rarewildflower.org is the first program undertaken by the trust to support the natural environment. The objective of the program is to fund projects serving to preserve and recover the natural ecosystems in the East End's ocean habitats, bays, beaches and flats, estuaries, streams, creeks, shorelines and tidal wetlands.

The Brine Family Charitable Trust is a recognized 501(c)(3) established as a private nonoperating foundation under section 509(a) of the Internal Revenue Code. Records are available for inspection at Brine Charitable Trust, 254 Katonah Avenue, Suite 201, Katonah, New York 10536. The trust does not accept donations.

you don't like the truth, you can't handle it." Jonathan Cheban and Simon Huck of Command PR were hard at work entertaining the models and making sure VIPs were taken care of, including Samantha Cole and Anna Anisimova, who giggled, "Believe it or not, I am wearing Victoria's Secret underwear!" Outside, Bobby Brown rolled up with his entourage and posed for pictures with his new girlfriend, Alicia Etheridge. Why did Bobby choose SBTS? "They invited me, I'm not one to really think about where I go, I just go, if there's a party, I'm going." According to Brown, he's gearing up to star in a new TV show, "It's a reality sketch comedy, and it's very funny. I'm creating characters for this show. I get a chance to do a lot of characters and be a lot of people."

Brown is trying to make a career comeback after his tumultuous 14 year long marriage with Whitney Houston ended in September of 2006. Aside from Bobby's TV show, which he insisted is not based on his life, Bobby is focused on touring a new album. And as for his relationship with Whitney? Brown told me, "Well me and Whitney, were humorous, we're friends, we have a daughter together, so that's why we take care of her together. We take care of her and that's the way it goes."

This past Saturday, SBTS was just as entertaining. British artist and superstar Lily Allen arrived with DJ Mark Ronson. At 2 a.m., Allen and her entourage took the stage and performed their hit song "Smile" for several VIP's including Tinsley Mortimer and Lizzie Grubman. This coming Saturday, model and socialite Lydia Hearst is scheduled to launch her Puma handbag line. If you're wondering how to partake in the festivities, Satsky's has a tip, "Get comfortable with somebody within the SBTS family, because it's a family environment here and that's how you get through the doors.

North Fork, "in 1999, the courts and the state of New York allowed us to come back." Now, of course, horse farms are more than welcome on agricultural land. But in the early 1990s, the East End was still covered in potato fields, which made polo fields seem more like a playground for the rich than an agricultural endeavor. But, as one of their main businesses is "raising, training and making polo ponies," the Southampton Polo Club is not only a Hamptons institution, but a place where the agricultural nature of the East End continues to flourish.

The Southampton Polo Club's season is now one of the most anticipated sporting events in the Hamptons. And it all started because Frank wanted to play polo with his wife.

of every club from Friday night until early Tuesday morning that weekend. At Stereo by the Beach, the club had reached capacity by 11:30 p.m. — at most clubs in New York City, the door usually gets busy around one a.m. Throngs of people stand outside for hours, begging and bribing to get in, with little success. At Neptune's in Hampton Bays, Joel remembers, "people stood on line for four hours just to get in, waited for two hours to get a drink at the bar and no one complained. One guy offered me one thousand dollars to let him in the back door." Bribing never works, but this episode was a telltale sign that, if you like to go out, "it's gonna be a real good summer." That was no small statement coming from Rodney, who has spun private parties for P. Diddy and worked at Marquee and other New York City nightclubs for years. When asked which new Hamptons clubs would be really hot this summer, he replied "WhiteHouse. Everyone who goes there has a great time." But what about last year's star, Pink Elephant? "Pink Elephant is more of a lounge," Joel explained. "People go there to have a drink and relax before they go somewhere else. I think that's what they're trying to do and it's been working really well for them."

Last year's staples will still be able to coexist with the new glitterati magnets. But who will win this year's popularity contest? This summer, according to Sean Gallagher, it's not about one club attracting the most attention. "The clubs aren't out here to make a killing financially," he explained. "They're here to strengthen the brand." Stereo by the Sea is here to keep Stereo on everyone's mind, Dune is here marketing for Marquee and Pink Elephant is here spreading the word for Pink Elephant in New York and Chicago. The clubbing web is expanding and the Hamptons are caught right in the middle of it. And what a dazzling, intoxicating web it is.

her."

An assist should go to Monday's rain. Due to a wet field, Reale was forced to conduct an indoor practice. It was inside he noticed a mat set up on the floor so he decided to setup a drill in which the players were diving on the mats making catches.

"Molly was killing herself; her hips were sore and bloody" Reale said about the freshman's effort during the diving drill. "It helped."

Nolan's game saving catch prevented a last inning run scored by Clarke from doing any damage. First baseman Marta Johann caught a fly ball in the top of the seventh inning to end the game. The Bonackers had reached the bar they set prior to the start of the season.

"After losing [in the Long Island Championships last season] 3-2 on an error to Floral Park, our goal was to get to the states," Reale said.

East Hampton last reached the state finals when the Bonackers won the Long Island Championship in 2001.

Stavola, who struck out eleven batters, pushing her Long Island strikeout record to 340, said she likes her team's chances in the one loss elimination, two game Southeast Regional Finals scheduled for Binghamton in Upstate New York on Saturday.

"Our coach always tells us the only team that can beat us is ourselves," Stavola said. "Just one down. Two more to go."

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Programs

NY - A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, lowers monthly payments by 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and prepayment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a FREE REPORT "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

The Land Of Bicyclists, Osprey Nests And The Free

The Flags On The North Fork That Remind You What It's About

By Phyllis Lombardi

Flags of our fathers – mothers, sisters, and brothers, too. They're all over the North Fork and most often we take no particular notice of them. Like the air we breathe or the mid-June sun that warms us.

Then, in that same June, a certain day comes around and we think, "Oh yeah, June 14 is Flag Day."

Next week, as a matter fact. So no better time to check out a few of those North Fork flags. We're talking about American flags and not the decorative flowery things that float over so many front doors. Or the banners that wave WELCOME or shout SALE from so many of the shops lining Main Road from Riverhead to Orient.

Of course there are thousands of American flags on the North Fork. Flying from porches, attached to bicycle handlebars, topping fences. So many of them we don't even notice.

And then, not expecting to, we come across a North Fork American flag that kind of stops us short, gets our attention and affection. Reminds us what it's all about.

Like when you're coming to Long Island from a few days spent in New England. An hour or so on the Cross Sound Ferry, the North Fork, home. You see it then, the American flag at the entrance to Orient Beach State Park. You see it and you just feel good.

For here, at the park, the flag flies over the land of the free as well as the land of bicyclists and osprey nests. The land of hikers, kayakers and picnic lunches. Of birdwatchers, bay watchers.

Travel west a bit and there's another American flag that will get you thinking. I suppose that's appropriate. After all, isn't thinking what school is for? The Oysterponds Elementary School on Main Road raises a flag that acknowledges what is happening in the comfortable building across the wide lawn. Children learning. Perhaps it's a history lesson they'll not appreciate till years later. Or maybe they're struggling with long division (they still do long division, don't they?). In any case, the kids are in school. The gift of American-flag citizens to those who will carry on.

Down the road there's a pretty impressive flag that takes you by surprise. You're traveling west through Southold. Maybe it's a summer Saturday afternoon so Main Road is crowded with cars, the sidewalks with shoppers and even Silversmith's Corner on Main Road and Youngs Avenue has people milling about. Probably there for a concert. Anyway, you'll pass Southold Library and Town Hall and St. Patrick Church. Nothing unusual. You've done it all before.

But then the road curves and the American Legion Griswold-Terry-Glover Post 803 is right in front of you. Their American flag is right in front of you. And you know that those who sacrificed for that flag have given you all you've just passed – the shops, the churches, the libraries, the town halls. Even the music.

It's just a few minutes away from the American Legion – this next flag. And it's quite a bit smaller. But impressive nonetheless, for here Old Glory keeps vigil over the Old Burying Ground in Cutchogue. On the corner of Main Road and Harbor Lane, the cemetery, owned and maintained by the Cutchogue-New Suffolk Historical Council, has weathered gravestones dating back to the early 1700s.

Look closely at those gravestones and you'll see that the American flag flies over names synonymous with North Fork. Tuthill and Case. Terry and Wells. Horton and Goldsmith. Some who own those names were given back to the earth even before our flag saw its birth. The grand old flag really isn't so old.

It seems fitting that our flag-tour concludes with the flag in the center of the traffic circle on Route 58 in Riverhead. Here is where the action is. North, south, east, west. We travel in all directions, to schools, and malls, to courts, hotels and a hospital. Most of the time we travel the circle courteously, easing in when we can, following the rules. Maybe that's what the Riverhead flag is telling us. That we have to drive and live by a few rules. Easing in when we can.

Funny thing about a circle. You come back to where you started. That's just fine if you're coming back to the North Fork.

Painting The Streets

The 11th Annual Riverhead Community Mosaic Street Painting Festival

By Ruth Thomas

The 11th Annual Riverhead Community Mosaic Street Painting Festival presented by the East End Arts Council on Sunday, May 27 had something fun for everyone. The main event was the spectacular street painting, but there was also a life-sized checkers tournament, storytelling for kids under a tent and West African interactive drumming circles, topping it off with live music amongst the over 40 exhibits of arts and crafts to see and buy. Proceeds from the Community Mosaic go to support scholarship opportunities for students at the EEAC Community School of the Arts.

The Community Mosaic is a FREE, all day celebration of the arts, held on the grounds of the Arts Council on Riverhead's Main Street. Approximately 3,000-4,000 people attended this year's event that has been steadily growing since it began 11 years ago. Patricia Snyder, Executive Director of the East End Arts Council has been there from the beginning, when it was held along the Peconic Riverfront. Starting last year, due to construction along the Riverfront it was moved to Main Street and because of its great success, it was held there again this year.

Event sponsors included Bethpage Federal Credit Union, Riverhead Free Library, Astoria Federal Savings, Cross Sound Ferry, North Fork Bank Foundation, Knapp-Swezey Foundation, Riverhead Chamber of Commerce, Motosport Brokerage, Friends of the Riverhead Free Library, and the Town of Riverhead and Suffolk County Dept. of Economic Development. These businesses sponsored many of the street painting squares for $75-$300. Artists exhibiting could reserve a 10'x10' square for $25. Other squares registered in advance were free or $20 on the day of the event and chalk was provided for all who could participate in this interactive visual art.

While street painters created their masterpieces on Main Street, a life-size checkers tournament was being played out on a giant checkerboard off Main Street. Sponsored by The Urban League and the Council for Unity together with The East End Arts Council, this event was a real winner for kids and adults alike. Near the checkerboard was the Storytelling Tent, sponsored by The Riverhead Free Library, featuring several renowned local storytellers and interactive musicians including Johnny Cuomo, Harvey Heilbrun, and African Folk Heritage storyteller Joyce Duncan. Talking Drum West African interactive drumming circles let kids discover their own musical talents.

As kids enjoyed interactive music under a tent, live music could be heard on stage throughout the day. The EEAC's Local Musician's Showcase on the Riverhead Showstage brought a variety of local musicians to perform. Composer George Cook Maul demonstrated his improvisation; urban poet Ulysses Colon read his poetry; Yvette Malavet-Blum beat to the sound of Latin rhythms; and The Freedom Choir from the First Baptist Church of Riverhead sang their psalms. There was a niche for every kind of music lover. By the end of the day the folk/rock music of Liza Coppola, the Jimi Hendrix Experience, the John Brzoza Band and Jordan Hope were each humming. Quite a musical medley for one day!

And if that was not enough, walking through the many exhibit booths displaying arts and crafts for sale along with food and drink made this a very special day in Riverhead. There was plenty to see and buy from booths, with three-dimensional art made from corks, tie-dyed shirts echoing the 60s, large posters and miniature paintings, and fine jewelry and handmade crafts. For more interactive performances, the Spiral Wave Poi exhibit was the place to be. Here displayed and demonstrated were handcrafted Poi (a tribal dance art form and tool from the South Pacific) by local artist, Susan Blacklocke. Made out of parachute material in every color of the rainbow, Spiral Wave Poi was twirled around in colorful patterns together with music, Zen, yoga, or dance. Kids and adults could all join in the tribal dance form of Spiral Wave Poi.

The 11th Annual Riverhead Community Mosaic Street Painting Festival held this Memorial Day weekend was a true celebration of the arts in Riverhead and a welcome glimpse of what is yet to come to this town on the edge of revitalization.

Perhaps We Could Still Get Coffee?

Cutchogue Village Market Is Turning Into A Real Estate Office

By Phyllis Lombardi

You can't get a buttered roll with a really hot cup of coffee, so good on a snowy morning, in a real estate agency.

And in July, after browsing a crafts fair on the Cutchogue Village Green for an hour, you can't wander into a real estate agency and pay a dollar for a drink. Ice cold.

So imagine my distress hearing Cutchogue Village Market, a landmark deli/café on the southwest corner of Main and New Suffolk roads, was to be no more. The employees, the customers, some deli delicacies. A deli eulogy, if you will.

We'll start outside with the awnings. Over the years they were yellow, or black and white stripes, or a deep maroon. Always pretty, always reminiscent of "olden days" even in 2007.

Those olden days? Well, in the 1940s it was Rysko's Market. Then Nolan's, Olsen's, Ireland's – but the market was always there, right on that corner. Michael Rutigliano was the last owner. He and his staff served the North Fork well. For reasons none of my business, the owner of the property, not Michael, decided real estate was the way to go.

Come into the market with me one last time. Sit down at one of ten tables. That one by the window looks good. The one with the checkers game waiting for players. Let's get coffee and look around.

On the walls are pictures past. Cutchogue's Long Island Rail Road station on Depot Lane. Long gone, that station. There's an early photo of Fisherman's Rest Restaurant. It closed just recently. I know the North Fork will miss that, too.

Finished your coffee? Then see this. The menu board features cream of broccoli soup and corned beef. Greenport's Nelly Mendoza, who works here, says fried chicken is a favorite take-out, as well as thin-crust pizza. Nelly's found a job on Shelter Island. Good for you, Nelly. Come back and visit with us.

Over here on the counter. Drop your change in the "Audrey" canister. Audrey's the North Fork dog that was viciously attacked and now fighting for her life in rehab. Medical bills? Generous North Forkers will come through.

Near the counter you can pick up a copy of Dan's Papers. If you want, get a coffee refill and sit down and read. Until a friend comes into the market and you start to gossip. It's always that way. The way it should be, I think.

Or talk to someone you don't know. I love to do that. On this last day I approached a table occupied by Shannon and Gregory Messina. They've lived in Mattituck for a year (their home, a yellow cottage, belonged to Shannon's grandma). Shannon didn't know the market was closing and when I told her she was saddened.

Shannon's happy on the North Fork. Working in New York City on 9/11, she walked over the Brooklyn Bridge trying to reach her Long Island home. Her father met her in Brooklyn.

Shannon's in business for herself now. It's Yellow Cottage Crafts featuring decorative items she hand-paints. All this I learned from a few minutes in the market.

I said my good-byes but before I drove away, I stopped in Cutchogue Fire Department – right next door. Those guys will miss the market. Longtime volunteer Ben Andruski worked at Rysko's when he was a teen. Ben's volunteer pal, Jim Fogarty, recalled that Mr. Rysko was a volunteer fireman and when the siren sounded he ran from the market and began directing traffic on Main Road.

So bring on that real estate agency. We wish it well simply because North Forkers are decent people. If these real estate folks are real wise, they'll have available, perhaps just on weekends, coffee, rolls, sliced meats and cheese, potato salad, fruit and cookies. Oh, and dill pickles. Now this would be a real deli estate.

No question about it. You can take the deli out of Cutchogue but you can't keep Cutchogue out of a deli.

Quite The Sailor

Tuttle O'Grady Borrows A Sailboat For A While And Leaves An Impression

By T.J. Clemente

It is that time of year. The painting and scrubbing is completed. The sails are mended, tended, and ready to slide up the halyards to once again bring motion to a vessel that has spent the winter in a parking lot, or driveway or boatyard. There is a magic to getting all the preparations done, and then the anticipation of seeing the keel sink into the water only to see it again in late October. The winter was long and cold, the spring short but the summer season is now here and the magic of sailing off the sandy coast of the North Fork is at hand. An old sailor once told me the story of the first time he ever saw Greenport. He was a commercial fisherman out of Bristol, Massachusetts; He was on a 79 dragger when a sudden storm caught him and the crew in the midst of one of their best catches. The ocean seemed to swallow the rusty metal fishing boat and then spit it out into wicked winds and rougher seas. The captain refused to go to Montauk because there was an arrest warrant out in East Hampton because he laid out a former police officer with one mighty blow over a remark about fishermen. It was the town dock in Greenport he was hoping to reach to collect his wits, repair the boat and again step safely on the shore.

The captain never made it to Greenport alive. A large metal shaft collapsed and hit him square on the head the only time he had left the bridge to check out the vessel. The storm subsided and the crew voted to bring the captain to Greenport as he had intended. The police were efficient, but understanding the crew sold off the fish and went out to the bars. That night, one of the crew members, an old man, met the woman who became his wife and he never left.

I met this man, Tuttle O'Grady on Preston's dock one summer. By this time his wife had passed on. He said he'd watch my sailboat as I went around town to buy new deck shoes.

He looked at my 23 foot O'Day and asked if I'd mind taking him out for a short while, for some reason I said yes and to this day I am glad I did. Tuttle O'Grady had sailed with his dad in the forties. He made my boat sing a song in the wind I never heard. The sailboat hit true pitch runs and reaches for Tuttle. I never knew it had that in her. Every sail in every direction was in high feather. I was in awe of the magic this old seaman had. He rarely smiled as he read every breeze as if it where the Holy Grail. We shared some rum from a pewter flask I had. He didn't seem to like its quality but said nothing. As the sun began to set he headed back for Greenport.

His wife's soul he said rides the breeze off Greenport. She guides him through every tack and reach. He feels her magic, when the breeze touches him like she touched him that very first day after he walked on land bringing ashore his dead captain. Tuttle was a man of few words but when he spoke he meant it. I am sure what he told me, he believed. And now when I think back to that day I believe.

Last year I could not find Tuttle anywhere in Greenport. I am not sure what has become of him. But every time I sail, I think of him sitting right where I am sitting, making my boat one with the wind, hitting true notes and pitches as only the finest instruments can. I now know his wife knows me too, and when I catch the wind just right, I know she smiles because she knows I know she's out there.

The Jamesport Manor Inn

370 Manor Lane
Jamesport
631-722-0500

It's impossible to conceive what went though the minds of Matt Kar and his wife Gail when they heard the news early one morning that their newly restored restaurant had been destroyed by fire only a few weeks before it was due to open. The Jamesport Manor Inn was originally built back in the mid 1800's and had been turned into a restaurant around 1965 but had been empty since 1999. Matt Kar owns the very popular Jamesport Country Kitchen and the Christopher Michael off-site catering company and when he purchased the old house, he and Gail decided to restore it to its former splendor. Fortunately, Gail took many photos of the interior and exterior of the house so when they decided to start again, after the fire, they had plenty of references. It is amazing that in nine months, they and their builders, Owen Construction of Calverton rebuilt the house, which is now absolutely beautiful and the quality of the workmanship and attention to detail is incredible.

But back to the food aspects. Eric Rickmers is the Executive Chef, a native of Long Island who, after culinary college in Manhattan and a spell in Alaska and travels in Asia, most recently cooked for six years with Starr Boggs. He describes his style here as being New American with a Mediterranean flair. He relies heavily on local produce and likes to change his menu daily, although I believe, based on our experience that some of the dishes we tasted should become signature dishes and hopefully be available regularly.

The dining room is naturally broken into smaller areas that make for a nice sense of privacy and the décor and settings are warm and comfortably elegant.

We started with a salmon roll tempura with mori, caramelized leeks and seaweed salad and this was a very tasty and rather different appetizer. The inherent taste of the salmon stood up well to the other rich tastes. We could not pass on the Reeves Farm asparagus, the season here is so short and Eric prepared this wrapped in prosciutto and served with morel mushroom and parmigian reggiano. Again, a very good blend of tastes and textures.

Speaking to Eric before we ate, he was enthusing about the superb quality and freshness of the Mattituck black sea bass that he was serving whole that evening. We shared one and it came with a very Greek style blend of Northville Farm baby beets served with their own cooked leaves, a dish that brought childhood memories back to Stella. The fish was a masterpiece - yes served on the bone it requires some work to fillet the fish but the result was doubly worth the effort. For our meat course we chose another dish that we had both grown up with in different countries, calves liver. Now unfortunately, there are so many, especially among the young, who blanch at the idea of eating such foods as liver or kidneys. I have to say that this was a wonderful dish and we both agreed that we have never eaten better liver. The liver was succulent, softly tender and accompanied by apple wood smoked bacon and a sauce that really complemented the tastes. This is a dish that should always be on the menu as long as liver of this quality is available.

Other wonderful sounding entrees included salmon, tuna, wild mushroom risotto, Kobe flat iron steak, veal chop and duck - really something for all tastes.

Desserts are all made in house, apart from a Briermere fruit pie. We only had room for the delicious drunken cherry and pistachio bread pudding and that with an excellent cup of espresso brought an excellent meal to a delightful close.

When dining here you must take the time to go up to the top floor, admiring the staircase and the paneling as you go, because Gail has turned the whole floor into an art gallery where the East End Arts Council are displaying works by local artists that are changed every two months. The gallery is beautiful and really shows the paintings to their best advantage.

The wine list is international in scope with many wines from the Mediterranean region as well as from Long Island. The prices are exceptionally sensible. You can get a bottle of wine from $16 with many around the $20 mark.

Appetizers range from $8 to 12; Main course from $25 to 30 and desserts are $8 to 9.

Matt and Gail Kar deserve so much credit for sticking to their dream, even after the tragedy of the fire. The new building is a tribute to their vision and the skills of the workmen who built it and the restaurant is a wonderful addition to the North Fork that will draw diners from far and near. Reservations are already necessary, particularly on weekends. The restaurant is currently open for dinner seven days a week and they plan to open for lunch, probably starting some time in late June.

OVER THE BARREL...

with Lenn Thompson

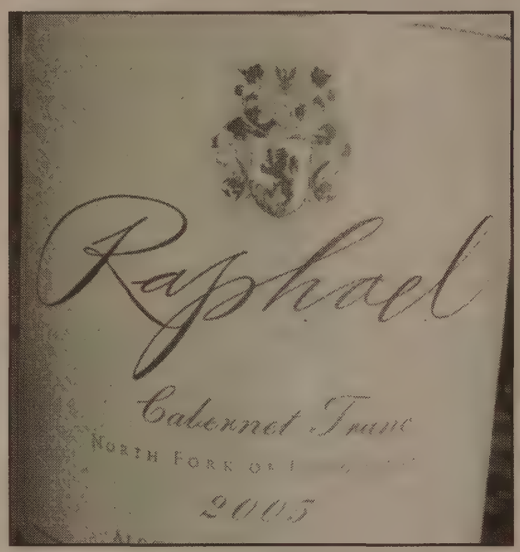
Raphael Brings Four for Food

One of the greatest things about Long Island wines is their food-friendly attributes. Many are fruit-forward, but they almost never plunge into the jammy, "fruit bomb" territory of many New World wines. Alcohol levels usually hover around the 12-13% level as well—so you can have two or three glasses of wine with dinner and not need a nap. Cool nights and ocean breezes help growing grapes retain their natural acidity too— another great benefit for those who like wine with food. A move away from heavy new oak—or at least more judicious use of said oak—also results in wines ideally suited to table time.

Raphael, and its winemaker Richard Olsen-Harbich, have four recent releases that really fit the bill for summer-time table duty.

Olsen-Harbich, who has been making wine on Long Island for nearly 30 years, is unrelenting in his dedication to Long Island's grape-growing abilities. His wines reflect our region's distinctiveness—its terroir if you will. He doesn't try to make California wines. He doesn't try to make Bordeaux wines. He makes Long Island wines—it's that simple.

A clean, refreshing new white, the 2006 Grand Cru Chardonnay ($16) is made entirely in stainless steel tanks—the way the winemaker thinks local chardonnay shines most brightly. The nose is somewhat austere, but offers faintly fruity pear and melon aromas with a wonderful smell of the sea in the background. That almost-salty minerality carries through and drives the palate with the pear and melon character taking a step back. Medium bodied with substantial—but balanced—natural acidity, this would make a great house wine this summer. The finish even lingers longer than expected.



Chardonnay is the most planted white grape in North Fork vineyards, but some of the most exciting wines I've tasted lately are made with sauvignon blanc, including Olsen-Harbich's Raphael 2006 Sauvignon Blanc ($22). If the Grand Cru's nose is the shy guy at the party, this wine's nose is the party animal that everyone knows. It is explosively aromatic with fresh-cut grass, kiwi, gooseberry and grapefruit demanding attention. There's even some of that 'cat pee' aroma that is found in many New Zealand sauvignons. Intensely flavorful in the mouth, it's extremely citrusy and grassy with tart, snappy acidity and a terrific, lengthy finish. A delicious, appetite-whetting wine to be sure.

Much like sauvignon blanc's relationship to chardonnay locally, cabernet franc often plays second (or even third) fiddle to merlot, but not when it comes to Raphael's 2005 Cabernet Franc ($18), it is a star in its own right. This wine captures the ripeness of a tremendous vintage and purely expresses why this grape is so well suited to Long Island. Many local winemakers use plenty of oak when making their cab franc (with widely varying results), but this wine is made without oak, resulting in what may well be my favorite local red under $20. The nose is loaded with red cherries and raspberries that are accented by floral spice and earthy notes. The palate is richly flavorful with cherry, spice and earth and pleasant structure—the result of acidity and skin tannin rather than overbearing oak.

The last member of this foodsome foursome is Raphael's second-label 2004 Estate Merlot ($16), which very well may be the best second-label merlot in the local market. It is a medium-bodied red with black raspberry and black cherry flavors, is soft and fruity with nice earthy-leather notes that keep it from being simple or boring.

DAN'S TRAVELS

Clippity Clop by Sabrina Mashburn

The Sport of Kings, Part 1

This week, I have been gearing up for my first polo lesson at the Southampton Polo Club. I dropped by the club last week and, contrary to my previous belief, polo ponies are not scraggly cast-offs from other equine disciplines. These horses are big, gleaming, muscular athletes with a sparkle in their eye and, for the most part, extremely forgiving temperaments. Once I looked out over the three perfectly flat polo fields, I knew that I had to try it. So, on Friday afternoon, I am taking my first polo lesson. Stay tuned for a recap of that lesson next week. For now, here's a polo primer to get everyone ready for this season.

A polo game, called a match, is played with two teams of four players each on a grass field. The playable part of the field is 300 yards long and 200 yards wide, marked by a white line. The goal posts, at either end of the field are placed eight yards apart. A game is separated into chukkas, which are seven minutes and thirty seconds long. Professional games have eight chukkas, while most club games have five or six. There are three minutes in between chukkas and five minutes at half time during which the players change horses. In professional polo, horses play no more than two chukkas in an afternoon, with a rest of at least one chukka between chukkas played. In club polo, horses may play in up to three chukkas, depending on the speed of the game and the fitness of the horse. At the end of each chukka, the teams switch sides of the field.

The purpose of the game is simple – use your mallet to hit the ball into your opponent's goal. However, a complex penalty and handicap system keeps it interesting. Handicaps are what distinguish amateur players from professionals. The handicaps are called goals and are on a scale from -2 to 10. Most professional players play with a handicap of five goals or more. Once a team of four is established, the players' handicaps are totaled to find the "team handicap." If each player has a handicap of four goals, the team would be referred to as a "sixteen-goal team." When two teams of unequal handicaps play each other, the team with the lower goal-number is given the difference in goals before the start of the game. If a sixteen-goal team plays an eight-goal team, for example, the eight-goal team would start the game with eight goals already "scored," while the sixteen-goal team would start with a score of 0.

Ignacio "Nacho" Figueras

Once the game begins, penalties can be given for excessively rough play, for crossing in front of another player who is following the ball on its exact line, hooking an opponent's stick from the opposite side of the pony as the ball, or running another player off the field by charging at them from an angle. The severity of the offense and degree of danger determines how severe of a penalty is issued. Penalties range from the ball being tossed ten yards from the offending team's goal to a free hit from 30 or 60 yards away. Only the team captain may speak to the umpire or dispute a penalty.

If you want to watch some serious professional polo, head over to Two Trees Farms on any weekend in July or August to watch the best of the best compete at the Brigehampton Polo Club's high-stakes tournaments. Some of the teams, such as Black Watch and White Birch, have already attained household-name status. As far as the players go, there are many rising stars to watch this season. However, there are two favorites worth knowing about before you go. Ignacio "Nacho" Figueras is my pick, not only because he is a 6 or 7-goal player (depending on the year) and the captain of the Black Watch team, but also because he is the face of Ralph Lauren's Black Label Collection, making him the poster athlete for Hamptons sports around the world. Speaking strictly sports, however, Adolfo Cambiaso as the most important player to watch. Cambiaso has been playing at the ten-goal level since the age of nineteen and is considered the best polo player in the world. Although he has played for White Birch in the past, he will be playing for Crab Apple this year.

For more information on the rules of the game, the stars and when tournaments are being held, visit www.sportpolo.com.

Take a Hike with Ken Kindler

This year looks like a bad year for ticks on Long Island Trails. The last two years we had a lot of rain causing the woodlands to grow at a tremendous rate. We've had several mild winters in a row, many trees are denuded by several years of successive caterpillar infestations giving the brush layer more sun than usual and there seems to be less maintenaince on the trails. If people were reading my articles, they wouldn't be showing up for hikes while so poorly protected against ticks.

Ticks are extremely simple creatures and therefore very predictable and easy to deal with. They don't have teeth or stingers and, compared to most insects, they move rather slow. There is no reason to allow a fear of ticks to interfere with your enjoyment of the trails.

There are some guidelines to follow when hiking Long Island's trails. Don't hike a trail that isn't cleared well enough so that you can't walk in the middle of it without having bushes or grass brush against your legs. Forget about walking a trail that is less than 2.5 feet wide. If the sides of a trail have grown together, call the land manager and let them know that they have an unsafe trail. Always stay on the trail and wear light-colored clothing so you can see if you are picking up these unwanted passengers. Wear tight-woven socks that you can tuck your pants into. I wear women's white knee-highs over my socks and pants. Tuck your shirt into your pants so if you are inattentive for a while, you can still catch them higher up. Treat your socks and pants with an insect repellent that has permethrin as the active ingredient and carefully follow the directions for application of the product. I've been experimenting with other products but haven't found anything yet that works as well. Check for ticks often. They catch their ride between sneaker and mid thigh, and then head upward. Pick them off your clothes and flick them with purpose and direction into the woods – not towards your friends. Check yourself before you enter the car. Check your entire body when you get home and shower. If one attaches to you, use tweezers to grab the tick as close to your skin as possible and pull it straight out. I've been playing in Long Island's woods for the last seventeen years and have yet to contract a tick-born disease. Obviously I have to make a disclaimer here. I can't guarantee that you won't have a tick attach to you, or that you won't get a tick-born disease. I can only relate my experience on the subject.

If we continue to entice tourists to visit the Long Island's beautiful network of trails, then it would be morally reprehensible if the land managers and volunteer groups didn't get together and figure out how to address this enormous maintenance issue cooperatively and quickly.

I suggest that you contact your local trails group and ask which trails are best maintained – Long Island Greenbelt Trail Conference 631-360-0753, Southampton Trails Preservation Society (STPS) 631-537-5202, East Hampton Trails Preservation Society info@easthamptontrails.org. The Southampton Trails Preservation Society has work outings every Thursday led by STPS Maintenance Chair Ken Bieger. He can be contacted at kbieger@optonline.net if you are interested in participating in an STPS trail work party. Last Thursday we moved a segment of the Paumanok Path (PP) and a bridge in Bridgehampton. To see our handiwork, you can park on the "island" where Stony Hill Road and Brick Kiln Road meet. If you walk south from the island about 150 feet along Brick Kiln Road, you will see where the PP comes from the west on what looks like a driveway, but is actually where Middle Line Highway crosses Brick Kiln Road. Look to your left (east) for the opening to the trail and follow it less than a mile to the section of trail we are presently working on. If you continue in this direction, the PP will take you to the Long Pond Greenbelt.

Next week, I will relate the interesting story behind the origins of a beautiful new little loop trail in the Dwarf Pine Plains in Westhampton. In the meantime, if you wish to walk this .06-mile trail, the directions are as follows: take Sunrise Highway to exit 63 south; the exit ramp enters Old Riverhead Road (County Road 31). Proceed south – you will see a large building on the left hand side of the road. Enter left turning lane and turn left into the Suffolk County Water Authority driveway. Parking is available on site.

Classic Cars with Bob Gelber

One of the most common e-mails I receive asks the question, "What current cars do you think will become classics in the future?" The simple answer is that highly desirable car today will be coveted in the future. The more complex answer is that the previous sentence is not always true.

Nobody wanted the Tucker Motor Car when it was introduced. The BMW 507 sold poorly when it was on the market. No one in America wanted a 1950 Volkswagen Bug or a 356 Porsche of the same era. Recently at the Barret-Jackson Car Auction I saw a 1960s Dodge Super Bee bid to $60,000. Besides its silly name, this car was always a joke among car enthusiasts. Yet, who among us wouldn't want any of the above cars, with perhaps the exception of the Super Bee, in our garage? The point I'm making about car collecting and values is that the rules are the same as they were in the movie Fight Club. If you remember, the first rule of Fight Club was that you do not talk about Fight Club.

There are some cars that are instant collector cars – Ferraris, Porsches, Corvettes, certain Mercedes and Bentleys. These high-priced vehicles have always had a wish list following and always will. Twenty to thirty years from now, the kids who have pictures of them hanging on their bedroom walls will have the purchasing power to buy their childhood dream as a collector car. These types of vehicles are the blue chips of current production cars. Buy one, keep it maintained, waxed, rust free and garaged for decades and the odds are that you'll make money on it.

However, and it's a big however, do you really want to keep a car that long? How many people have enough garage space to house the same old car for that period of time? Like most car enthusiasts, I sold my Ferrari, Porsches and Fords many years ago, usually because I tired of them and wanted another car. I was astounded to learn that my old Porsche racecar sold for $1 million a decade after I sold it for a paltry $10,000. Why didn't I keep the Porsche 550 racer, the Ferrari and the Ford Woodies? Like most older car collectors say today about the current value of collector cars, "If we only knew."

The days of the $3,000 1955 Mercedes Gullwing and the $500 1940 Ford coupe are gone, but there are interesting cars currently in production that should make for an enjoyable investment at a reasonable price. The car that immediately comes to mind is the Mazda Miata. This car is solely responsible for the rebirth of the low-priced sports car. Like the highly desirable British collector classics such as the 1955 MG-A or the early Austin Healy 100, the Miata will someday have a strong collector following. An added bonus with the Miata is that the car is virtually bullet proof from a mechanical standpoint. I would put my money on the original first series Miata. Like a 1955 356A Porsche, it's the first series and the purest looking of the marque. Speaking of Porsches, the mid 1990s Porsche 993s were the last models to have an air-cooled rear engine. I see their prices already rising. A Porsche will cost you considerably more than a Miata, but you will see a bigger return on your investment. A good 1990 Miata will cost under $10,000 while a good Porsche 993 can be found for under $40,000. By "good" I mean an all-original car with proven low mileage.

There are a lot of sleepers out there. The Acura NSX is one of them. A truly excellent landmark car for the Japanese, its only weakness is that it has always competed with the Italian and German sports cars for dominance. The same can be said for the Z cars from Nissan, or the Mazda RX-7 and the excellent but unappreciated Toyota MR-2. Japanese sports cars have never gained the street credit that the European cars have achieved.

Speaking of credentials, there are a slew of high performance Japanese cars that are making waves – the Subaru WRX, Mitsubishi Lancer Evolution, Mazdaspeed four-door sedans and the screaming Honda Civic SI. My guess is that in the future these will be highly desirable collector cars appealing to an entirely different kind of car enthusiast than we have in the marketplace today. Other long shots are the current Mini and Volkswagen GTI. Like I said earlier, if you want 'em today, you'll want them three decades from now. Forget about those SUVs. In the future, gasoline will be so expensive, no one would want a collector SUV. A "collector SUV," now there's an oxymoron.

Go Fish

Fishermen and fisherwomen, now hear this – THE FISH ARE IN! Fish being caught in local waters are fluke, weakfish, porgies, blues and striped bass. In Shinnecock Bay, the incoming tide brings loads of sand eels and fluke. Medium-sized blue fish (called "cocktail blues" weighing two-to-five pounds) are also in Shinnecock.

We recommend purchasing bait at local bait shops (Hampton Bays, Sag Harbor, Amagansett, Montauk, Southhold, etc.) because they know the local waters and where the fish are now. Most of the action is in local inshore bays as the offshore (ocean) waters are still very cold.

Ken Morse of Tight Lines Tackle in Sag Harbor reports fluke of five to eight pounds in the Harbor itself. Large stripers are being caught trolling with wire lines or drifting with live eels as bait in the waters between North Haven and the south Shelter Island ferry slips. Ken also tells us a 49 lb. striped bass weighed in at his shop.

Steve at Wego Fishing Station in Southhold says large porgies are in Peconic Bay and bluefish are also everywhere. There are stripers being caught in Plum Gut and weakfish off Roses Grove in Southampton.

Brian of East End Bait and Tackle of Hampton Bays notes plenty of fluke in Shinnecock Bay with many "keepers" (19.5 inches or longer) and throwbacks. There are also some stripers being caught with clam bellies, and bluefish are everywhere.

Harvey Bennett of The Tackle Shop in Amagansett says there are fluke off the red can buoys in Napeague Harbor, bluefish in Gardiner's Bay and porgies at Cartwright shoals.

Paulie of Paulie's Tackle in Montauk says surf fishing has been slow but fluke fishing is good north of the Lighthouse with fish of ten pounds and up.

JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID:
CMEE- KIDS CREATE P.E.A.C.E

BY EMILY HART POST

With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post

The outdoor theater was hot, but luckily the show was hotter as kids put on a show about PEACE. It means People Engaging Art Creativity and Enlightenment. It was a musical about people and things getting along performed by kids. There were animals telling stories about finding peace in their environment – something all people need to learn about. The show was put on at the Children's Museum of the East End in Bridgehampton. It was a beautiful day and kids and their parents filled the theatre until there was not a spot left to sit. We got there early so we got a great spot.

DON'T FORGET – e-mail my dad david@star-inme.com about events, parties and cool places to visit in the Hamptons. See you there.

Learn About Piping Plovers!

When you are at the beach this summer, you might notice another animal besides seagulls, crabs and jellyfish, and that animal is the piping plover. Piping plovers are those cute little birds hopping along the shore. They are also the birds protected by the fences you may see on some of the beaches this summer. Piping plovers are special birds because they can only be found in a few places, including Long Island, and because they are endangered.

A piping plover has yellow-orange legs, a black line on its forehead and a black band around its neck. The upper part of its body is gray and the bottom part is white. The gray and white colors of the piping plover help it blend into its sandy habitat.

The beaches of Long Island are home to this tiny bird, which can also be found along the rest of the Atlantic coast, by the Great Lakes and on the Great Plains in the center of the country. The piping plovers that live along the Atlantic Ocean nest on beaches from southern Canada all the way down to North Carolina and then spend the winter in places in the South, from North Carolina to Florida and even in the Bahamas.

Piping plovers leave their winter homes and move to their nesting grounds between the months of March and May. When they arrive at their summer homes, they build their nests and plan to stay for about three to four months. The plovers build their nests on the beaches above the high tide line so that the water does not come up to disturb them. The nests are often close to the dunes. To make their nests, the plovers dig a very shallow hole in the sand and sometimes line it with small rocks and shells.

The piping plovers will then lay about three or four eggs, which will hatch in about 30 days. Like the adult birds, the colors of the eggs keep them camouflaged or hidden from danger. After the baby piping plovers, also known as chicks, learn to fly, which takes about a month, the piping plovers return to their winter homes.

When they are hungry, piping plovers walk along the beaches at the water's edge and hunt for marine worms, insects and crustaceans such as crabs, lobsters and shrimp. The chicks will follow their parents and hunt for their own food.

The piping plover has been endangered since 1986. When an animal is endangered, that means that it is in trouble because its population is so small. If there are not enough piping plovers, they could disappear forever. Other endangered species include whales, tigers and panda bears.

The piping plover is endangered for lots of reasons. One reason is that they live on beaches where many people come to play and walk around. These people can sometimes accidentally disturb the nests of the piping plovers and also scare them when they are looking for food. People are not the only things that can disturb plovers. Kites, pets, cars and even fireworks can be threats to the birds. Natural predators, or animals that hunt other animals for food, are another reason that the plovers are endangered. Foxes, raccoons, seagulls and skunks are all predators of the piping plover. Trash left on the beach attracts extra predators and puts the plovers at risk.

Being endangered is very serious, but there are ways you can help. When you go to the beach, pay attention to the fenced areas where the piping plovers are nesting. Don't go too close to these areas. Be careful when you are playing and make sure your Frisbee or tennis ball doesn't get too close to the nests either.

Another thing you can do to help the piping plovers is to carefully watch your pets when you take them to the beach. Keep your dogs and cats on leashes and don't let them bother the piping plovers. Pets can become predators to the piping plovers if you let them.

Finally, one last thing that you can do to help is to remember to take your garbage off the beach when you go home. Hopefully you already do this, since littering is bad for the environment, but now make extra sure, because, as you just learned, trash puts the piping plovers in danger.

Help protect the piping plovers by doing all these things and they will be around for summers to come!

The weather has been just about perfect and as I drove to Sag Harbor, I noticed the beach was almost filled to capacity. Then I drove over the bridge and saw that the village was almost filled to capacity. Where did everyone come from? Who cares? Let's shop!

On Noyac Road in Sag Harbor at the Whalebone General Store, you will be ready to enjoy the beaches, pools, parties and more with the collection of gidgy-gadgy fun stuff including floats, pool and beach toys, beach chairs, flowers, t-shirts and eclectic giftware for the hostess with the mostest! I found the cutest little, colorful, beaded key chains called "Wac-a-doo-dles" that are handmade by a local. I just had to scoop up a few to give as gifts to my favorite people. Also look for greeting cards, souvenirs, games, lamps and lighting, gifts and more than you can imagine under one cute little roof. And don't pass by the flower garden where Linda has hanging and potted plants for every occasion.

At Accents Backyard Essentials By J. Tortorella, retail store on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays check out the Spa-Tacular Tent Sale that will be happening from Thursday, June 7 through Sunday, June 10 from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. You will enjoy the free giveaways and great summer savings on the latest spas.

Heading over to Southampton, I stopped at the original Hildreth's on Main Street to check out the 30% off on all Stanley Furniture including bedroom, dining and occasional and special orders. The "My Haven" collection is available in twenty colors, which makes choosing a color that fits and fills your space easy as pie.

Then I stopped at Casual Home on County Road 39 in Southampton, just to take a look at what is new there, which I usually do, and see what the sale is about. If you are looking for affordable furniture and accessories this is the place, and while you are shopping there is a bonus – No Tax Sale. There is plenty to choose from here, including bedroom, dining room, living room, children's room furniture and accessories.

Country Gear, Bridgehampton

Stop in at Patio.com on Montauk Highway in Southampton for a fantastic Father's Day Sale that is in progress. This sale will save you up to 40% on all the teak collections – a perfect family gift to dad. There are also sales on grills, hammocks, fire pits, bars and much more, so get going...

The Bridgehampton Commons is home to many of us as far as shopping is concerned. After all, it's the only game in town, with a great group of stores and plenty of parking. I stopped in Victoria's Secret for their semi-annual sale and filled up a basket full of cute tops, undies and accessories at 50% off. My girls will be thrilled when I dump the entire bag on the table and say, "let's shop."

At TJ Maxx, in the Bridgehampton Commons, you can see that the store is gearing towards Father's Day merchandise, which is right around the corner. There are brand name apparel and high performance gear for up to 50% less than pro shops and sporting goods store prices. Look for pro-golf brands, bags, golf balls, apparel, gifts and so much more...what a nice thoughtful gift for Dad!

Country Gear on Main Street in Bridgehampton is having their summer inventory clearance sale on both outdoor and indoor items. The Loom Italia merchandise and many other old pine, painted and walnut items are also on sale at a significant discount. The sale continues through the summer in the Garden and Basement. Open 7 days from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

At Rumrunner Home on Main Street in East Hampton, look for a solid teak sale just in time to spruce up your patio or deck. Stop in and browse the full line of Cavendish Watson Plantation Teak that is available exclusively here. The teak sun loungers are also reduced from 499 to $399 and add a cushion for $125. Don't forget Rumrunner Home is also opened on Hampton Road in Southampton.

At the Polo Country Store on Main Street in East Hampton and at Ralph Lauren on Jobs Lane in Southampton, you can shop for dad for sure. I picked up a few great Polo shirts for my boys on their special day, in my favorite color purple.

Until next week, Ciao and happy summer shopping!

If your shop is having a sale, has new inventory, if you are a new business or have relocated, and want everyone to know about it, please e-mail me at shoptil@danspapers.com and newkids@danspapers.com or via fax at 631-537-6755. I would love to hear all about it!

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO FUN IN THE HAMPTONS

Summer Shows at Guild Hall

Where is Guild Hall's outstanding summer programming now that the John Drew Theater is undergoing renovation? Out at wonderful locations in East Hampton. The shows begin on Saturday, June 16 with a classical music concert at the historic Woodhouse Playhouse, then dinner and Dear Mr. Sinatra with cabaret/jazz stars John Pizzarelli and Jessica Molaskey at the Maidstone Tennis Club on June 29, and then on to internationally-acclaimed choreographer Karole Armitage's new modern ballet Ligeti Essays at a Huntting Lane estate on July 21, plus two new American Musical Theatre Salutes on August 5 and 26 at East Hampton Studios with KT Sullivan, Eric Michael Gillett, Melissa Errico and George Dvorsky.

The John Drew Theater's artistic director, Josh Gladstone, is producing and directing Steve Martin's comedy, Picasso at the Lapin Agile, at East Hampton Studios from August 14 through September 1 and Playwrights' Theater of East Hampton continues its John Drew summer season with staged readings of Joe Stein's comedy, Enter Laughing (based on Carl Reiner's book), on August 12, and David Mamet's searing drama, Oleanna, on August 19.

The Guild Hall Museum has two major shows at its home base. "Dan Flavin: An Intimate View" is a retrospective of the minimalist sculptor's work on view June 16 through July 29. Portrait artist Billy Sullivan's work is featured in a major exhibition running from August 11 through October 21. East Hampton's lush estate gardens will be feted in a two-day "Garden as Art Tour" on August 24 and 25.

First up on June 16 is the Playhouse Project concert with young Russian pianist Gleb Ivanov and classical Arabic music composer/conductor/performer Bassam Saba. They will perform in the unique Tudor-style playhouse created by East Hampton philanthropist Mrs. Lorenzo Woodhouse and architect F. Burall Hoffman in 1916. Owned by the Brockman family since 1958, the Playhouse continues as a special performing arts venue. The program is underwritten by the Brockman family, the Swiss Global Artistic Foundation and Guild Hall.

The Playhouse Project gives grants to young, local and gifted musicians. The June 16 concert and reception begin at 5:30 p.m. at the Playhouse, located at 64 Huntting Lane, East Hampton. Tickets are $75. Reserve by calling Guild Hall at (631) 324-0806 or e-mail jmgoleas@optonline.net.

The big Guild Hall benefit this year – dedicated to the John Drew Theater renovation – is the cocktail party, dinner and show starring guitarist/singer/songwriter John Pizzarelli and his cabaret star/Broadway vocalist wife Jessica Molaskey on June 29. Pizzarelli, the son of legendary jazz guitarist Bucky Pizzarelli, grew up listening to iconic popular music interpreters Nat King Cole and Frank Sinatra plus the music of classic American songbook composers Sammy Cahn, Jimmy Van Heusen and others. He has recorded many best-selling CDs including Dear Mr. Sinatra, Live at Birdland, Knowing You and Bossa Nova. A top-draw cabaret and Broadway performer, John was featured in the recent PBS series Legends of Jazz and you can hear his joyous voice on Foxwoods Casino's television ad theme song "The Wonder of It All."

Jessica Molaskey received rave reviews for the cabaret show with husband John this past winter ("a musical marriage made in heaven" according to The New York Times). She is also a songwriter and veteran of a dozen Broadway shows. Her singing voice has been compared to Peggy Lee and k.d. lang. Ms. Molaskey co-hosts the nationally-syndicated radio program "Radio Deluxe with John Pizzarelli" and will make her solo debut at the Algonquin Hotel's Oak Room this coming winter.

John Pizzarelli

The duo will perform their favorite Sinatra songs after cocktails and dinner at the Maidstone Tennis Club on June 29. Benefit tickets are $350 and $500 and are available by calling Guild Hall at (631) 324-0806 or online at www.guildhall.org.

The next big Guild Hall event is the Armitage Gone! Dance Company's performance July 21 of the "Ligeti Essays" suite, which has just premiered to great acclaim. Based on Hungarian composer Gyorgy Ligeti's music, the suite has two sections. The first is a cycle of songs written to the poetry of Sandor Weores. The second part is danced to Ligeti's last major composition, Hamburg Concerto, for horns. The ballet closes with his Musica Ricercata for solo piano.

Choreographer Karole Armitage is an American born in Lawrence, Kansas, who first studied with New York City Ballet alumna Tomi Worthan, and then Ballet West in Aspen and NYCB's School of American Ballet in New York. She graduated from the notable North Carolina School of the Arts and danced with Balanchine's Geneva Ballet and then Merce Cunningham's modern dance company. She began to freelance choreograph modern ballets and was invited by Rudolph Nureyev to choreograph for the Paris Opera Ballet. She built a successful career in Europe and returned to the U.S. in 2005 to form the New York-based Armitage Gone! Dance Company.

The troupe will be dancing in the gardens of an East Hampton estate on Saturday, July 21. There is a limited-admission cocktail party at 4 p.m. ($100) and the estate grounds open at 5 p.m. for general admission ($30, no charge for children 12 and under). Tickets to "Ligeti Essays" are available at the Guild Hall box office (631-324-4050) or online at boxoffice@guildhall.org.

The American Musical Theatre Salute on August 5 is "The Warmth and Wit of Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart." Singers KT Sullivan, Eric Michael Gillett, music director James Followell and host Lee Davis present the show at 7:30 p.m. at East Hampton Studios in Wainscott. The August 26 salute is "Irving Berlin in Hollywood" with Lee Davis, James Followell, and singers Melissa Errico and George Dvorsky. Tickets to each show are $50 ($45 for members) at the Guild Hall box office, and a reception follows the show.

Theater performances at East Hampton Studios begin on August 12 with Broadway star Lewis J. Stadlen directing a staged reading of Joe Stein's comedy, Enter Laughing (tickets $18-20). A full production of Steve Martin's comedy, Picasso at the Lapin Agile, is onstage from August 14 through September 1 (tickets $28-30). A staged reading of David Mamet's dramatic Oleanna is August 19, when Picasso takes a night off. Read about Guild Hall's summer programs each week in Dan's Papers' "Take Five" column.

2007 tony award predictions...by gordin & christiano

The theater award season is upon us and one of the grand daddy's of New York theater awards, the Tony's, will be presented this Sunday. Spring Awakening, the rock Broadway musical by Duncan Sheik & Steven Sater, was the big winner when the nominations were announced in 25 competitive categories by the American Theatre Wing scoring 11 nominations, with the musical Grey Gardens right behind with 10. In the Dramatic category Tom Stoppard's epic tale, The Coast of Utopia, stunningly produced by Lincoln Center, is in a league of its own with 10 nominations.

A little less than two weeks ago the Drama Desk handed out their annual awards and while they recognize achievement both on and off Broadway, they are a barometer for the Tony Awards that recognize achievement on Broadway only.

Christine Ebersole

Let's get right to our selections in the major categories as space is limited.

Best performance by a featured actress in a play: Martha Plimpton, The Coast of Utopia took home the Drama Desk. Look for her to repeat gaining momentum from her recent win.

Best performance by a featured actor in a play: A difficult category. Boyd Gaines, Journey's End won here at the Drama Desk, but is nominated as leading actor for the Tony. Gordin likes Anthony Chisholm, Radio Golf thinking he will score for his catalytic performance in August Wilson's final drama, but Christiano believes Billy Crudup's showy turn in The Coast of Utopia, will be carried along by Coast's numerous wins.

Best performance by a leading actress in a play: Christiano thinks Eve Best will repeat her victory from the Drama Desk for her complex performance in A Moon for the Misbegotten, but Gordin is looking for the legendary actress Vanessa Redgrave, The Year of Magical Thinking to edge out another legend Angela Lansbury, Duece making a return to Broadway after a 25 year absence.

Best performance by a leading actor in a play: Frank Langella, Frost/Nixon for his sterling work, if he doesn't shoot himself in the foot. He has already picked up just about every major award. Close behind is Liev Schreiber, Talk Radio, who was excellent as well, but won in the featured category last year. We don't expect Boyd Gaines to defeat these two, although he was marvelous.

Best direction of a play: Jack O'Brien, The Coast of Utopia for his stunning achievement, but David Grindley, Journey's End did harrowing work and the cast, under his guidance turned in the best ensemble performance of the entire season. Bravo guys!

Best Play: Tom Stoppard's epic The Coast of Utopia will beat out the worthy competition. We loved them all, but Coast's mammoth three-part production is a major accomplishment.

Best performance by a featured actress in a musical: Mary Louise Wilson, Grey Gardens is most deserving and should win.

Best performance by a featured actor in a musical: Gordin loves John Gallagher, Jr., Spring Awakening, but Christiano thought his performance was all external and likes Christian Borle, Legally Blonde for his winning charm.

Best performance by a leading actress in a musical: Christine Ebersole, *Grey Gardens f*or her truly unforgettable once in a lifetime performance that she originated off Broadway and which she will be taking to London next season.

Best direction of a musical: Michael Mayer, Spring Awakening... original indeed!

Best musical: Spring Awakening, the ground breaking new rock musical by Duncan Sheik and Steven Sater is our pick, but we also adored Grey Gardens about two East Hampton recluses related to Jackie O. Both musicals transferred to Broadway from other venues. Spring Awakening took the Drama Desk this year, but did not compete head to head with Grey Gardens, which was nominated last season for it's off Broadway debut.

Best revival of a musical: We liked 110 in the Shade best, but with the exception of The Apple Tree any one of the four could make it to the winner's circle. They were all good, but we had reservations with each.

Best revival of a play: Journey's End was a devastating tribute to men of war, but couldn't find an audience.

The Tony Awards marking 61 years of excellence will be broadcast live from Radio City Music Hall on CBS, June 10, from 8-11 p.m. Tune in and see how your predictions compare with ours. A limited number of tickets may be purchased online through www.TonyAwards.com or by calling (212) 3074544 if you would like to attend.

Bug

Just as the scare-the-wits-outta-ya film, The Exorcist, gave new meaning to the occult and pea soup, the film's director, William Friedkin, gives new meaning to the phrase "the place is bugged." Don't laugh – his current creepfest, Bug, can crawl into your anxieties and infect your imagination for days. I might say, "It gets under your skin." Especially since that's the premise of this very intense psychodrama. Imagine a guy who has been used in an experiment by government doctors that combines surveillance technology and bio-warfare. They have implanted bugs in his skin that signal his position. It's bad for him as "they" are after him. He has escaped their mind-control combined with the itchy skin problem that he's convinced is contagious. Are you scratching your head or any other part of your body yet?

Charging the intensity of the movie Bug are the performances. The fleeing (or flee-bitten) escapee is Peter and, as compellingly acted by Michael Shannon, the insanity of paranoia is totally believable and highly disturbing. Mr. Friedkin could have chosen a big-name but Shannon did the role off-Broadway in the small, unnerving play written by Tracy Letts. Regardless of Shannon doing the 2004 play, I'm sure there's no other who could have conveyed the horror as well as he does. I must be careful of placing Bug in the horror genre. It does not fit tidily into that niche, not with a quality performance by a masterful underrated actor like Ashley Judd. She has been taking roles not up to her ability and some might say the same of her character Agnes in this movie but, Holy Moses, don't let the bedbugs bite! It gives her the opportunity to show what great chops she has. In lesser but equally rash roles are Lynn Collins as Agnes' friend R.C. and Harry Connick, Jr. as Agnes' recently paroled ex-husband, Jerry.

The director wisely opens the picture on open, desolate plains that convey the isolation of Agnes. Also, it underscores her alienation. Her ex-husband had abused her and their six-year-old vanished ten years earlier. Now, she's living in a sleazy efficiency in a dumpy motel and eased by vodka and cocaine. She works as a waitress in a hot lesbian bar along with her fellow server, R.C. Agnes is physically warm with her but only because she badly needs human contact. Then, R.C. brings to her a nice (not an ax-murderer) drifter. It is Peter. He says he needs a place to crash and sex is not a part of it. Yes, but what about the boring bugs? Together, Agnes catches Peter's mania and the little buggers have been sending their rundown address to "them." Anonymous calls ring the phone off the hook. Heavy buffeting shakes the motel. Not helping the disturbance is Agnes' ex-husband leaving prison. He's as volatile as an active volcano and Connick's menace is a great surprise to us, as it is to the couple under siege.

Peter's lunacy has taken in Agnes largely because he's there to explain her problems as she adheres to his conspiracy theories. What has become of Agnes' child? So why was her ex pardoned early and is now pounding on the door? She has fallen for Peter's lines and taken in his little ones. He has answers for all her doubts and she needs them.

When her sanity begins a tight spiral towards death, the couple methodically wall themselves into a cocoon. Bizarrely, Agnes allows in a Dr. Sweet for a crack pipe hit and a bleak talk. Otherwise, the claustrophobic tension mounts, as does the pain. If you can take Peter's digging the bugs out of his body, the sounds employed by Friedkin may shake your own pain level. Ms. Judd's emotionally jarring, naked performance swirls out of this world, even in the strict confines of the close, airless and suffocating scenes. The directors' deliberate contrast, built by his vast outdoor opening landscapes, make the interiors more minute than can be imagined. You may be prepared for an extremely abrupt ending that could unglue your sane, sensible wig. But, maybe not. Be prepared for more shocks from director William Friedkin who, like Ms. Judd, is vastly underrated – possibly because of his own scary choices.

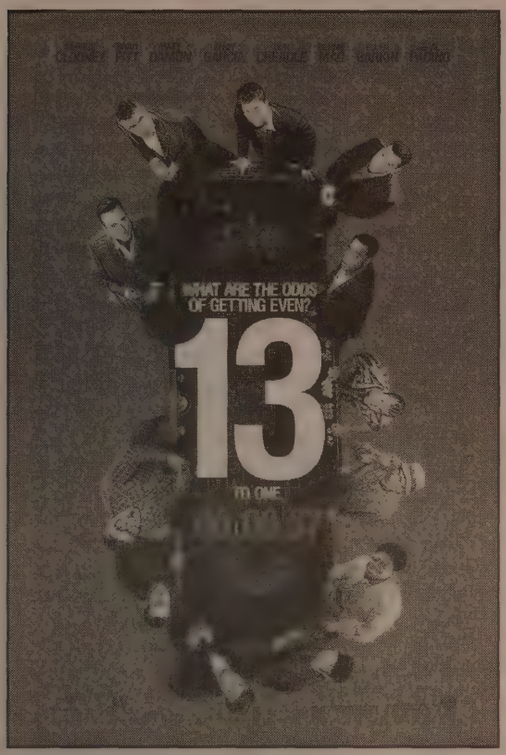
Mike Vilensky's MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS



Surf's Up

An animated movie about penguins making a documentary movie about surfing, all mirroring humans. Very meta! With the pretty sound of Zooey Deschanel on voice over, I can't complain too much about this fun film. Plus, I gave Shia LaBouf's last movie a bad comment – this time, I'll spare him.

Oceans Thirteen

Viva la trilogy. Julia Roberts and Catherine Zeta-Jones are out, but the Clooney/Damon/Pitt tripod are back for a final gamble. If you saw the first two, you can pretty much bet on a confusing plot, director Steven Soderbergh's strange storytelling style and unseemly editing, but enough on-screen chemistry between the older, real life Entourage-esque boys to entertain you.

Hostel: Part II

Like in its precursor, three naïve Americans studying abroad in Europe are lured to a hostel by a pretty person. This time, the overzealous Americans happen to be women. But again, the message hits hard: STDs are not the worst thing you can wake up with when you follow your libido. This gore-fest should give you enough nightmares to take a vow of celibacy. Until you study abroad.

La Môme

The story of Edith Piaf, famed and unfortunate French singer, is fascinating and strangely timely. Piaf was like a 1940s starlet with a bad upbringing and controversial actions, but tons of talent. But in the 1940s, she managed to escape a crotch-shot "Scary Skinny!" Us Weekly cover. She did not manage to escape a plethora of lovers and an early death, but her beautiful voice, unlikely success and strong character make her a celebrity not to be forgotten – or at least one worth watching a movie about.

Mr. Brooks

A detective follows a potential serial killer, a normal man with a dangerous alter ego. Kevin Costner and Demi Moore follow a possible blockbuster, another movie that will probably flop. I am tired of these "psychological" crime dramas starring established actors and attractive 40something-year-old women. What kind of genre is that? A forgettable one.

Knocked Up

The 40-Year-Old Virgin director and team are back with what is poised to be this summer's comedy hit. But that team is not nearly as awesome as the starring couple who can be credited as the hot alien from (cancelled) WB teen sci-fi series Roswell (okay, and now the hot girl from Grey's Anatomy) and the stoner from (cancelled) NBC teen comedy series Freaks & Geeks. Color them a comeback.

Dining in the Hamptons

Side Dish
By Aji Jones

FOOD & CO. in East Hampton is one of the Hamptons' mainstay caterers since 1993, and it has new ownership by Stacie Pierce and Eric Miller. The duo's plan is to build on the existing core business of FOOD & CO., which has a strong reputation for year-round, first-class and large-scale receptions and events in the Hamptons. The aim is to continue the full service catering operation but with several innovations. For public inquiries please call FOOD & CO. at (631) 329-1000.

East Hampton Point Restaurant will now be open for lunch Friday and Saturday from 12-3 p.m. and brunch on Sundays from 12-3 p.m. Dinner will be served every night from 5-10 p.m., except on Sundays when dinner starts at 6 p.m. A light snack menu is served on the deck Monday-Thursday from 3-5 p.m. with items such as raw bar selections, tuna tataki, caesar salad and charcoal-grilled black angus burger. For reservations or more information call East Hampton Point at (631) 329-2800.

Michaels' at Maidstone Beach in East Hampton is now open seven nights for the summer season. Dinner is served from 5-10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and until 11 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. Sunday brunch is not available. For reservations or further information please call Michaels' at Maidstone Beach at (631) 324-0725.

Harbor Bistro in East Hampton now offers a three-course Before the Sunset prix fixe menu for $29 every night from 5-6:30 p.m. The special will also be available all night, every night at the bar. Menu items include: goat cheese crouton salad; duck confit and mushroom crepe; seafood penne pasta; pistachio crusted tilapia; fines herbs salmon; roasted free range 1/2 chicken; pork tenderloin; and crispy banana spring rolls. For reservations or further information on the restaurant, call Harbor Bistro at (631) 324-7300.

Almond in Bridgehampton has added some new items to their menu. They include: white bean hummus; rabbit and sweetbreads terrine; shank of lamb with grilled asparagus, roasted fingerling potatoes and gremolata; stuffed breast of veal with baby carrots, hard cut pasta and truffle oil; and rosemary skewered shrimp with sweet pea orzo "risotto," crispy leeks and pancetta. Almond is now open Thursday through Tuesday and closed on Wednesday. For more information or reservations call Almond at (631) 537-8885.

Thyme & Again in Southampton now offers a BBQ menu for Father's Day on Sunday, June 17. This special menu is ideal for dads and grads and will be available throughout the summer season. A sampling of BBQ menu items include grilled marinated flank steak; grilled pepper crusted filet of beef; grilled lime marinated tuna; chicken, beef, shrimp or lamb kebabs; Dijon potato salad with spring onions; lemon scented basmati rice salad; and sliced watermelon. For further information call Thyme & Again at (631) 287-7354.

MUSE Restaurant & Aquatic Lounge in Water Mill is now offering two days of happy hour. Beginning on Thursday June 7 happy hour will be offered Thursday and Friday from 5 to 7 p.m. Free appetizers will be served at the bar. The restaurant is open six days a week for dinner starting at 5:30 p.m. and closed Tuesday. For more information or a reservation at MUSE Restaurant & Aquatic Lounge call (631) 726-2606.

Cooperage Inn in Baiting Hollow presents Mismatched, a theatrical presentation by The Other Vic Theater Company, with a four-course prix fixe on Sunday, June 10 at 5 p.m. Dinner guests are invited to participate in this murder mystery/comedy written by Steve Kalomeris in which a cash prize will be awarded to the person who solves the murder. The cost of the dinner is $49.95 per person in addition to tax and gratuity. Reservations are required and tickets must be purchased in advance. For reservations call Cooperage Inn at (631) 727-8994.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

"Strawberries, strawberries, strawberry fields,
Oh what sweet aromas and flavors this Extraordinary fruit yields!"

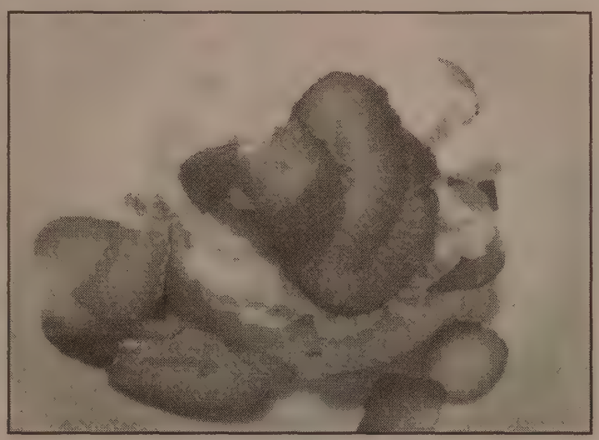
Fresh, juicy and locally grown strawberries should be ripe and ready for picking any moment now. According to our local farmers, baskets overflowing with the colorful fruit will be available at farm stands and farmers' markets – or you can join the band of berry-pickers visible in the fields in the coming weeks. Be sure to select berries that are uniformly bright red from the stem down to the bottom of the fruit.

Kathleen King of Tates Bake shop in Southampton revised her timely strawberry short cake recipe to incorporate cocoa powder and chocolate chips for a chocolate loving friend.

When the barely sweetened cakes are split open horizontally and sandwiched with lightly sweetened cream and luscious berries you will exclaim, "That's real shortcake!"

In addition to her famous chocolate chip cookies Kathleen has added 100% whole wheat chocolate chip cookies with bittersweet chocolate chunks to her roster. Sounds fantastic! One of my personal favorites from her shop is the key lime pie. The shop has added more tables outside for people to come and have a coffee and a delicious sweet – just the place to hang out and take a break on a summer afternoon.

Happiness is rummaging through files and finding recipes from another time – a time and place from my culinary beginnings. Fraises Tosca from my classes at the Cordon Bleu in London consists of fresh whole berries coated in a delectable raspberry purée and strawberries in Chianti wine is just that. I would surprise my students with this recipe when teaching an Italian cooking class in strawberry season.



KATHLEEN KING'S CHOCOLATE STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKES

The recipe was on Tate's website as recipe of the month in May.

Makes about 14 shortcakes

For the shortcakes

3 1/2 – 4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup Dutch-processed cocoa powder
2 tablespoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup cold salted butter, cut into 8 pieces
1 3/4 cups half and half
1 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
1 beaten egg with 1 tablespoon sugar for egg wash

To serve: Fresh local strawberries (or other berries) and freshly whipped cream.

1. In a large bowl stir together the flour, cocoa powder, baking powder and salt. Using two knives or a pastry blender cut in the cold butter and blend until mixture is crumbly and the size of peas. Add chocolate chips and stir to mix into the dough. Make a well in the center and pour in the half and half then stir slowly to incorporate into the mixture thoroughly. If using an electric mixer with a paddle, add half and half slowly mixing vigorously at medium (#4) speed for five seconds. Cover the bowl with plastic wrap and refrigerate for a couple of hours or overnight before rolling out.

2. When ready to bake, preheat oven to 375 degrees and lightly grease two cookie sheets or line the sheets with silpat.

3. Flour 2 large squares of wax paper. Place half the dough on one square and cover with the floured second square. Roll out the dough to a thickness of 3/4 inch. Cut rounds with a 3-inch round cookie cutter lightly dipped in flour. Place shortcakes about 2 inches apart on prepared sheet pans. Brush each cake lightly with egg wash. Chill remaining dough while baking each batch. Bake about 25 minutes. Transfer shortcakes to a rack to cool as they are done. The shortcakes can be baked ahead and stored in cookie tins for 2 or 3 days until ready to serve.

4. To serve, cut the cakes horizontally with a serrated bread knife. Spread bottom half with freshly whipped cream and a few berries and cover with top half. Float a dollop of whipped cream over the top and sprinkle on a few more berries.

To access Kathleen King's recipe of the month go to www.tatebakeshop.com.

FRAISES TOSCA

Serve this quick and impressive sauce over fresh strawberries.

Serves 4-6

1 pint raspberries
1/3 cup confectioners' sugar
1 quart fresh local strawberries, rinsed and hulled

1. Carefully rinse raspberries in a strainer then puree in a food mill: alternatively, purée in a food processor and push through a strainer to eliminate seeds. Sift the confectioners' sugar into the puree, slowly beating the mixture a little at a time until thick.

2. Place the hulled strawberries in a serving bowl and pour over the sauce. Let stand at room temperature before serving.

STRAWBERRIES IN CHIANTI WINE

It doesn't get any simpler!

Serves 4-6

1 quart fresh local strawberries
Juice of 1 lemon
4 cups good quality Chianti wine
1/2 cup granulated sugar

1. Wash and hull the strawberries and pat dry with paper towels. Place in a serving bowl and squeeze the lemon juice over the strawberries. Stir the sugar into the wine and pour over the berries. Let rest covered in the refrigerator for several hours.

2. To serve: Divide the berries into 4 to 6 dessert bowls or wine glasses and spoon some of the wine over the berries.

Dining in the Hamptons

Gosman's Dock

500 West Lake Drive
Montauk
631-668-5330

This past weekend, I had the pleasure of dining at one of my favorite Hamptons waterfront eateries, Gosman's Dock Restaurant. The last time I ate at Gosman's, I was too young to drive and had a safe, boiled lobster and corn-on-the-cob meal. This time, I was ready to sample all the delicacies this restaurant has to offer. Luckily, it is still early in the summer, so Victoria Cooper and I were able to sit at the perfect table overlooking the gleaming, nautical, wood-paneled interior of the restaurant and the impressive fishing vessels churning up the water outside.

Our server, Steven, began by taking our drink orders and bringing over a basket of fresh bread while going over the long list of specials. I was surprised to learn that it was his first week on the job as he gracefully fielded our questions about ingredients and explained how to most efficiently devour each type of seafood we ordered. One of the specials of the day was chilled King Crab legs, which Victoria and I polished off with record speed. The only other place I have tasted such firm, perfectly succulent crab legs was in the Florida Keys, where they catch them minutes before serving. Steven showed us how to deftly twist the crab with our wrists to pull out the meat without having to awkwardly dig into the shells with a miniature fork. Our next appetizer was the flavorful Gosman's Clams Casino with baked-on green bell pepper stuffing and a perfectly cooked piece of bacon adorning each clam. These were perfectly warm and fresh, with the plump clams still attached to their original shells, not pulverized into the stuffing as some restaurants are wont to do. The results are truly mouth-watering and I had to refrain from ordering more of these as I waited for the true stunner, my stuffed lobster.

A perfect stuffed lobster should be as moist as a boiled lobster on the inside, with a crispy layer of stuffing above – not an easy feat. Gosman's has mastered this art and my stuffed lobster not only looked beautiful, with its light pink shell and golden stuffing, but tasted perfect as well. The stuffing was soft and mild-tasting beneath the crispy top layer and consisted of a generous heaping of shrimp, tiny fresh scallops and more fresh lobster held together by a little bit of flavorful breading. The lobster was perfectly broiled and scrumptious, needing only a squeeze of lemon. The dish comes with melted butter, but the lobster is so delicious that I would suggest eating it as is and saving the butter for your corn. Victoria ordered the Shore Dinner, which came with a 1 and 1/4-pound steamed lobster, a Yellowtail Flounder fillet, a giant baked clam, corn on the cob and a fluffy crushed potato with chives. I was lucky enough to sample a bite of each item on her plate. Every mouthful was a full sensory experience that showed off the plate's perfectly complementary array of tastes and textures.

It came as no surprise when we finished our lobsters and noticed that the table was perfectly clean moments later and that our waiter, Steven, had returned to take our dessert order. As we were already stuffed full of the ocean's bounty at that point, we shared the house favorite – the warm, flourless chocolate cake with ice cream, whipped cream and fudge sauce. The outside was firm, the inside molten and rich and the generous scoop of ice cream had true vanilla bean flavor. Even the whipped cream was fresh and thick, perfectly complementing the rich chocolate taste.

The service at Gosman's is unparalleled in the Hamptons. As we finished each plate, it was quietly replaced by another. Our buckets of shells and dirty towelettes were replaced without asking, our glasses never emptied and our table was kept tidy – all without having to break our conversation. The atmosphere is deceptively casual – you would feel as comfortable dining there in flip flops and a sundress as you would in your best going-out attire – yet the speed and grace of the service and quality of the food is as good or better than many of New York City's finest restaurants. This is perhaps due to the fact that one of the owners, Roberta Gosman, was walking from table to table through out the evening, like the conductor of a great culinary symphony, checking in with each table to make sure every customer was happy with their food and that each dinner was going smoothly. In their quest to please every patron, the Gosman family's restaurant also has a wide selection of steak, chops and fowl as varied and delicious as its seafood, so even strict meat lovers can enjoy the exemplary quality and service of this Montauk legend while looking out onto the water as the local fishermen bring in the next day's feast.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

DAN WELDEN & GREGORY CORN AT GONE LOCAL

In an effort to keep art criticism fresh but still insightful, we critics often employ personal and subjective inspirational sources and/or "offbeat" interpretations. This doesn't mean to suggest that such meaning is flip, irrelevant or presumptuous even though we know the artist in question would never agree with our observations. Nor does our unconventional analysis infer that we are lacking experience or a comprehensive art background.

That said, let's consider Dan Welden's current show at Amagansett's Gone Local Gallery. It occurs to yours truly that his works, while similar to his "signature" ones, are also different. First, the nautical nature of the pieces remains the same, yet the emphasis on a boat's sail and general infrastructure (i.e. constructivist configuration) is dissimilar to previous endeavors.

Moreover, the mixed media medium evokes the impression that the works are paintings, not the usual prints which Mr. Welden is known for. However, the pieces are still impressive and striking no matter what changes we may rightly or wrongly perceive. Secondly, these external changes lead to another difference, and that's where the "offbeat" interpretation comes in. There appears to be more of a narrative thrust to Mr. Welden's works. For example, we imagine a story taking place in and among the sails, and off the boat as well. Where's the vessel going? Who are the passengers? What dangers, if any, lie ahead? Is this critic seeing too many Pirates of the Caribbean movies with Johnny Depp? "Scarlet Structures" particularly suggests a story taking place with its passionate reds and inherent danger associated with that color. Conversely, "Floaters" evokes a primordial story of the past with its grey hues.

Work by Dan Welden

Perhaps it's not the subject matter itself that inspires a narrative, but the sail as a metaphor that should be considered. Such an unconventional interpretation may include the canvas itself and its connotative meanings, the idea of sailing or gliding through the water, or sailing through life, stately and without barriers.

Mr. Corn's sculptures relate well to Mr. Welden's pieces, primarily due to their geometric shapes like blocks (in "Stitch") and the textures they suggest (like straw in "Elevator"). The idea of weight in Mr. Corn's works also has a commonality with Mr. Welden's sails whose sheer presence is pervasive.

The current show will be on view at Gone Local Gallery until June 14.

Inspirations: Ayurvedic Principles

In a world where fad diets and miracle exercise machines promise to provide you with a healthier you, we need to be vigilant about what we sign up for. While marketing and advertising are constantly barraging us with "quick-fix" options, there are alternatives for the conscious thinker. Diets that first emerged on the scene five years ago have no way of tracking long-term results. And isn't that what we're going for? Health in the long term? Some of the most ancient wellness traditions on earth still remain, keeping people living balanced, long lives. Ayurveda is a five-thousand-year-old tradition that originated in India, and is often thought of as "the science of longevity." Literally, Ayurveda comes from the Sanskrit words "Ayur," which means "life," and "Veda," which means "Science" or "Knowledge."

Ayurvedic principles are based on the theory that all six elements of nature - earth, fire, wind, water, air, and ether -- are present in the human body. All of these elements need to be in balance for the body to be at peak physical and spiritual health. Thus, creating an Ayurvedic lifestyle means figuring out what elements are more present in your body and your environment, and how to bring these elements into balance.

Ayurveda recognizes three basic sources of energy that are present in everyone and everything. There are no English words for these three concepts, so we use the Sanskrit terms Vata, Pitta and Kapha. While all three of these energies are present in everyone, one is usually dominant. If the energies become too out of balance, you may experience negative effects.

Vata is the energy of movement, composed of the elements ether and air. Vata is associated with breathing, blinking, muscle and tissue movement, and pulsation of the heart. In balance, vata promotes creativity and flexibility. Out of balance, it creates fear and anxiety.

Pitta is the energy of digestion, composed of the elements fire and water. It is responsible for digestion, absorption, metabolism, nutrition, and body temperature. In balance, pitta encourages understanding and intelligence. Out of balance, it can arouse feelings like jealousy, anger, and hatred.

Kapha is the energy of lubrication and body structure. It is formed from earth and water. It governs the bones, muscles and tendons and provides the glue that holds the body together. Kapha lubricates the joints and provides moisture to the skin. In balance, kapha manifests itself as love, calmness and forgiveness. Out of balance, Kapha may bring about attachment, greed, and envy.

You can tell which is dominant by looking at physical characteristics as well as lifestyle tendencies. For example, my hair and skin have the tendency to become dry, I am long-limbed and flexible, and I have a history of moving around a lot. Vata, the energy of movement, is much more dominant in me. However, my friend has thick, healthy hair and smooth skin. She is shorter and sturdier in body type, and she tends to get comfortable in one place and create a home there. Kapha is more dominant in her.

By knowing what energies are more dominant innately, you are better able to bring your life into balance. When I learned that I had a Vata imbalance, my Ayurvedic consultant, Jolie Parcher, suggested that I eat more olive oil and other healthy oils to replenish the moisture that is lost on Vata types. There are comprehensive lists of what to eat and what to avoid in each season, because the environment will also bring certain energies more into balance.

Ayurveda is about living well and preventing illness and weakness, as opposed to treating or curing disease. However, it is well-respected as one of the most ancient forms of medicine, and by incorporating the Ayurvedic principles into your diet and routine, you may bring to your life the balance it needs to allow you to be the highest form of your Self.

This summer, Ayurveda has come to the Hamptons! Mandala Yoga and Dance Center in Amagansett has branched out into Ayurvedic consulting. The director, Jolie Parcher, has been training at Kripalu Center for Yoga and Health and she is now a certified Ayurvedic Consultant. She meets with students in her new center, MAHA (Mandala Ayurvedic Healing Arts), and offers services including ayurvedic consultations, cleansing herbs, yoga classes, recipes, body care supplies and personalized cleanse plans. Life After Varicose

Approximately once per month, one of the physicians in my group receives a desperate call from someone who is overwhelmed by rapid bleeding from a "burst" varicose vein in their leg. While this is not the usual scenario that leads a person to seek treatment for their varicose veins, it is frightening and requires emergency treatment. Many people accept the appearance of the varicose veins in their legs thinking that treatment will be too involved or too painful. But, delaying treatment for this problem may result in profuse bleeding when you least expect it. More commonly, untreated varicose veins lead to increasingly aching, or throbbing legs especially after several hours of standing.

Varicose veins affect more than 25 million Americans. They are much more common in women than men. The typical symptoms can include pain, fatigue and leg swelling. Blood clots can also form in varicose veins, which is called phlebitis. This is a very painful and temporary problem, which is almost never life-threatening. Varicose veins are usually caused by a back flow or "reflux" of blood into superficial veins (just under the skin) from deeper veins under the muscles. This reflux of blood causes increased pressure in the small veins and branches under the skin, which causes them to bulge. There is pain that increases as the person stands or walks over a period of hours and improves when the legs are elevated. In some cases, the overlying skin can become chronically irritated and develop a rash or discoloration. The abnormal vein blood flow. is usually hereditary, but can be worsened by prolonged standing and pregnancy. Many have been led to believe that this condition is a natural factor of aging, but all age groups are affected. Without treatment, the symptoms can worsen and may result in the skin forming open ulcers, which usually appear at the ankles.

Before After

Spider veins may also result from abnormal venous circulation, but these are less likely to cause long-term problems. They are socially disabling for many women causing them to avoid certain clothing or activities like swimming or sun bathing. While support hose are helpful, clearly they are not welcomed at the beach.

The good news is that there are now many treatment options and most of these can be performed in doctors' offices. The main superficial (saphenous) vein that runs along the inside of the leg is usually the culprit. Back flow or reflux into this vein from the groin or thigh veins is the underlying problem. Luckily, this saphenous vein can be closed through a needle and catheter system in less than 30 minutes. In many cases, the closure of the saphenous vein leads to the varicose and spider veins shrinking and becoming less prominent. If there are larger, bulging branches can then be removed at the same time through tiny skin nicks. Smaller spider veins can be easily treated with injections of salt or chemical solutions (sclerotherapy) that cause them to gradually fade. Some physicians treat spider veins with a topical laser, but the best results are seen in people with very fair skin. Pigmented skin absorbs the laser light when it shines on the skin limiting those who can be treated this way. All of these procedures are possible with little or no sedation. Local anesthesia or numbing of the skin is often all that is necessary.

After treatment one of my recent patients, a hair stylist, commented that she had never realized how uncomfortable her legs had been for so many years. Another patient came to the office for her post-operative visit with a big smile and reported how light her leg now felt. These testimonials are common and most people wish that they had sought treatment sooner.

So, if you are living with your varicose veins, but not really living then consider having a consultation with an experienced vein surgeon. Delaying treatment just prolongs suffering and may lead to the development of more varicose veins and worsening symptoms.

THE Y FACTOR with Christian McLean

Running On Empty

There is a common misnomer that by exercising on an empty stomach in the morning, you'll burn off the calories you acquired the night before. While you will work off some of those calories, you'll probably work off more if you have a little something in the belly. I know what you're thinking – why consume calories if you're trying to get rid of them? The reason is relatively simple. Your body is like a car. If you wake in the morning and take it for a run without eating, it's like driving a car on fumes. It will go for a little while, but the distance it travels and its ability to perform correctly will be seriously compromised. Without morning nutrition you are more likely to workout at a lower intensity and reach fatigue earlier, as well as experience headaches, dizziness and nausea, which are all symptoms of low blood sugar. The other obvious factor that may come into play is hunger.

Solving all these problems can take a little experimenting because each body reacts to foods differently. There are a few general warnings. You don't need a heavy breakfast of bacon and eggs. Though filling, exercising on a stomach stacked with heavy, fatty items can make you sluggish and less productive. Dairy can be tricky. A bowl of cereal sloshing around as you run doesn't always make for the best solution, but, as I said, it is an individual preference.

What you are looking to create in your body is the proper combination of fuel and energy that will help you exercise. Breads such as toast or a bagel will digest quickly and give you some energy. They are also pretty neutral and shouldn't upset your stomach or weigh you down too much. For longer exercise routines try a banana. Not only does it have potassium (467 mgs), which will help prevent cramping, it takes longer to digest, which will give your body a more constant energy source. Avoid caffeine. Sure it'll wake you up and give you energy, but it is the wrong kind of energy. Your body will drop from the caffeine high and become exhausted. Also, caffeine will cause dehydration and may cause gastrointestinal situations including heartburn and diarrhea.

For big races, you hear about runners eating tons of pasta the night before because it is a carbohydrate and fills the muscles with glycogen (a sugar which provides energy). This may cause you to become constipated, which doesn't making running any easier. Wiser choices consist of ancient grains (quinoa, amaranth and kamut), whole grains, fresh fruits and vegetables. Also, this type of meal is for extensive events that can burn thousands of calories in one day. If you're just looking to lose weight by burning excess calories, this is not the option for you.

Eat somewhere between a half-hour to an hour before exercising. It will give your body time to begin digesting the light meal you just ate. You should stretch for a half-hour before you exercise to avoid cramps, tears or any other muscle injuries. This is also a good way kill downtime between eating and working out.

Hydration is a key component of proper morning exercise. Your body has just spent around eight hours without water so it makes sense to get some liquids in the system. Wake up in the morning and drink two glasses of water before you do anything else. It gives time for the water to be absorbed into your body. Continue drinking water before your workout. As you go, you will learn how much is too much. Fruit juice or sports drinks will also hydrate and give you some of the carbohydrates needed for exercises, but should not be used as a substitute for food.

After the workout there is a 45-minute span when the body is better suited for rebuilding glycogen levels in the muscles and insulin is at its peak level, which can help rebuild muscle protein. Eating a meal that combines carbohydrates and protein at this time will help restore muscles and reduce fat in the body. Try yogurt and fruit or a peanut and banana sandwich. If you miss this window, you'll end up decreasing your replenishment process by over 50%.

Finding the right balance of food may take some time, but once you do, the benefits will be well worth it.

Melt The Inches Away

True beauty is said to come from inside. Nevertheless, increasing numbers of people attach importance to presenting an attractive appearance and, as a result, are prepared to actively do anything to get it. Proper eating habits combined with exercise are still the best way for people to achieve their ideal figure. But often, these two methods are not able to produce the desired effect. Therefore, there is a demand on the part of many people for additional, effective measures to get rid of unwanted accumulations of fat in places that change of diet and exercise have left untouched.

There is now a non-surgical method for getting rid of fat. It is the process known as injection lipolysis. Now, fat cells can be permanently removed with their fat globules and absorbed by the body's natural metabolism. In this minimally invasive procedure, which, unlike liposuction, does not involve clinical surgery, a substance known as phosphatdichylcholine (PPC) is injected directly into the zone of unwanted fat using very fine needles. The active ingredient is a natural product, which is obtained from soybeans. It is also naturally produced in a similar composition in our bodies, where it performs a variety of functions, especially in connection with the fat metabolism. Since the procedure was first developed twelve years ago, injection lipolysis has long outgrown its infancy. The NETWORK-Lipolysis, which now embraces over 850 doctors from 52 countries, has developed the only therapy standard that exists for injection lipolysis, thus ensuring maximum safety and results for patients.

Studies relating to LipoDissolve are being conducted in cooperation with a number of universities. Today, data is available on over 60,000 treatments, all of which have been conducted in accordance with standardised treatment protocols developed by NETWORK-Lipolysis. The method works. It has acquired the status of a recognised procedure that has become established in the field of aesthetic medicine throughout the world and has also found recognition by the German Society of Aesthetic Surgery (GACD). Of crucial importance in achieving a safe and assured result is that the therapy be carried out by physician who has undergone training in injection lipolysis and is qualified to use it. Injection lipolysis is ideally suited for getting rid of small pockets of fat where the fat is soft and has the consistency of pudding, but can also be used for larger accumulations of fat, including cellulite. The essential prerequisites for a successful treatment outcome are that the doctor has received the appropriate training and that the patient has been carefully examined and fully informed about all aspects of the therapy. Interested readers can find further information on injection lipolysis on the Internet at www.injektions-lipolyse.de, the website of the ISL, the International Society for Lipolysistherapy.

Dr. Sherwood has an Aesthetic Medicine practice in Southampton. Brochures on LipoDissolve can be obtained from his office by calling (631) 287-9696.

Gadgets With A Splash

Congratulations, you've made it through another winter and, if you're lucky enough to have a pool, now is the time to enjoy the warm weather that's coming. Pool gadgets are a dime a dozen. Some are made for fun and others are made to make life easier. We'll examine a couple of new things out there that will sure make a splash this summer.

When I say gadget, I don't necessarily mean something small and electronic. In fact, the first on the list is neither. This is only for those with very large pools or access to a bay. It is the inflatable iceberg. Over 15 feet high with three climbing walls and a slide, this colossus will give your kids titanic amounts of fun. The climbing challenge ranges from beginner to expert depending on the side you choose. Get to the top and slide back down. Just remember not to play king of the mountain because someone may get injured. The other thing this iceberg may hurt is your wallet. At over $8000 it isn't something to take lightly.

Speaking about oversized floatables, you've got the Big Bobber. Designed to look like a classic fishing bobber (round, white on the top, red on the bottom) this little cooler can handle twelve cans and has a 14-inch diameter.

Though Apple hasn't released a waterproof iPod, there are other options to get your playlists out to the pool area this summer. Use H2O Audio's waterproof housings to seal the water out and secure some serious tunes in the water. Submergible up to ten feet, these casings and headphones are perfect for swimming laps or just floating around in an inner tube. If you want to listen to The Little Mermaid soundtrack at 200 feet, then you'll have to buy the DV series. They run from $80 and up. Nano cases are less and headphones cost around $40 and are not included.

The remote controlled robotic shark from Hammacher Schlemmer is something even Austin Powers would be proud of (though they are not equipped with frickin' laser beams). It is two feet long and dives to nine feet. The tale sways just like a real shark, the only thing is real sharks don't have a red propeller attached to the tail, go in reverse or only last for fifteen minutes.

If you want to feel like a remote control shark, you could get the motorized pool lounge chair and the remote control floatable serving tray, both from Hammacher Schlemmer. To take that mechanized underwater feeling to the next level, get your hands on the Sea Doo Aqua Scout G3. It looks like a bullet with a fan attached to the back, but strap on a snorkel and put it in the water and you better hold on. It'll pull you around the pool for about two hours at a max speed of 2 mph. Light and easy to use, it makes exploring the not so deep blue a blast.

If you'd prefer to actually burn calories in the water, you can find a slew of aqua-aerobics equipment. The Hydro-Tone Total System will get you started for under $200. Equipped with resistance barbells and boots, as well as an instructional video, you will be well on your way to making waves this summer by the old watering hole.

The coolest thing that I have seen will cost you a pretty penny, but it's worth it. If you're sick of calling Main Beach for surf reports or visiting surfline.com, get stoked and contact a company by the name of Surfparks. Though the organization is currently working across the country including Randall's Island, NYC, designing industrial-sized perpetual surf pools, maybe you can convince them that you need to spend every day of your life inside the greenroom instead of inside the boardroom. The surf parks create perfect waves all day long and can even be used indoors if that is what you desire. Beware they are huge and can take up the whole backyard, but for anyone who opted for acreage instead of oceanfront, here is your shot at having the best of both worlds.

So there you have it – from the top of the heap to the depths of the deep. Your swimming pool isn't just about holding onto a noodle for dear life or trying to ride an orca raft anymore.

– Christian McLean

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Beautiful Blue

I marvel at how quickly hydrangeas leaf out and set blooms each season. This versatile flowering shrub can provide a dramatic display when grouped and also works well as a single specimen. The large, complex flower heads come in colors from dark blue, to red, purple and white.

The name Hydrangea comes from a compound Greek word meaning "water-vessel." This refers to the roots that store a large quantity of water. While the name is Greek, the plants seem to have origins from several world locations including the Himalayas, North and South America and Central and Eastern Asia. Native Americans cultivated the plant as a curative for infections, arthritis and other ailments common to an aging population. The leaves were dried and used as a substitute for tobacco – and reportedly have a slightly narcotic effect.

The flowers themselves are of three main types – mophead, panicle and lacecap. Mopheads produce globe-shaped flowers that can be as large as a foot in diameter. The panicle-flowered varieties produce elongated, conical-shaped flowers up to 14-inches long. Lacecaps produce disc-like flowers about 6-inches across with florets that appear only at the circumference and have colored, seed-like nodes at the center.

In addition to being classified by flower type, there are five main categories of hydrangea frequently seen on the East End. These include the Smooth Hydrangea (H. arborescence) that produces a five-foot shrub with oval, gray-green leaves and dull white flowers, the Oakleaf Hydrangea (H. quercifolia) with deeply lobed, oak-leaf shaped leaves on a six-foot shrub with white, panicle flowers, the Climbing Hydrangea (H. anomala) that produces a large vine with shiny-green leaves and numerous white flowers, Peegee Hydrangea (H. paniculata) that can produce a shrub up to 20-feet tall with white flowers that fade to pink and French Hydrangea (H.macrophylla) that produces a mounding shrub up to six-feet tall with either pink or blue flowers. A sixth rare variety, Ayesha, is a fragrant shrub introduced shortly after World War II. It produces delicate pink to mauve flowers that have a waxy consistency – just beautiful and one of my favorites.

Hydrangeas are easy to grow. They respond extremely well to a little cultivation and protection from deer that find the leaves an irresistible salad. Deer can consume the leaves and flowers from an entire clutch of hydrangeas in one evening.

Because the shrub likes moist but not wet soil, it benefits from a site that is partly shady and that has enriched organic soil. French hydrangeas tolerate more sun that the others, but most prefer a situation with some light morning sun and afternoon shade. The shrubs benefit from regular feeding with cow manure or a multi-purpose fertilizer. They also benefit from plenty of water to keep the roots moist, but not wet or soggy.

Among some species, flowers can be forced to change color based on the amount of aluminum acidity in the soil. French hydrangeas produce blue flowers in acidic soils where aluminum is present. Flowers will be pink in more neutral soils where they absorb less aluminum. For some white-flowered, male hydrangeas, altering the pH of the soil can change the eye color.

To produce deep blue flowers, sprinkle aluminum sulfate around the roots to increase acidity. About a half-cup per 15 square feet of soil works well. To make the flowers pink, spread a cup of dolomitic lime over the same area. It takes almost a full season to see noticeable color change. Spreading spent coffee grounds around the plants also tends to enhance the blue color and may add to plant vigor.

Hydrangeas sometimes fail to bloom. This has two causes – winter damage or pruning at the wrong time. On most hydrangeas, prune plants immediately after blooming, but never later than the first week in August. Too much nitrogen from over-fertilizing will produce abundant leaves and no flowers.

Every garden on the East End ought to have at least one representative hydrangea. How would summer flower arrangements survive without them?

When you call Pulver Gas, you get to talk to a real person. No taking notes on which buttons to push. Whether you're calling about service or deliveries, you'll be talking to a caring customer service representative. Propane gas may be all the same. But propane gas companies are not. Which explains why, starting back in 1924, Pulver Gas has grown to be the largest, most trusted supplier of propane to homes and businesses on the East End.

Luxury Poolsides

Warm August evenings need no pomp and circumstance, just a keen eye for impeccable design. The atmosphere is in the waning heat and the salt caked on the side of your face, the radiating pink-cream sky, and the rustling sea grass. Integrate your environment (which provides 90 percent of ambient success) into your aesthetic vision. The essence of summer elegance is all in appearance of effortlessness, thus I can think of no better piece to begin creating a majestic poolside haven with than an authentic Indian tent.

After purchasing a tent from Rajasthan, Simon and Juliet Teakle received numerous compliments on their outdoor fixture and began importing and distributing the product under the newly conceived company name, The Pavilion Tent Co. The tent exterior is made of sturdy, hardwearing, water-resistant canvas and the linings come in a wide variety of colors and combinations offering room for total fantasy freedom! Hedonism feels guilt free when married to simplicity, so cultivate your dream lounge to every instinctual vein in your heart and feel great about it. The tents come in sizes ranging from the ability to accommodate a 60-person dinner, to space enough for just a few people gathering for a drink. Even if you don't want the tent as a permanent fixture, it's a must-have for events and dinner parties.

Let's go inside. Are you ready? Stretch out like a cat, full yawn and shudder included, on your Amalfi Tuxedo sofa by Janus et Cie. The plush cushions come in neutrals; an ashy white or barky-toupe would suit the understated aesthetic, while a splash of violet will retain the 'joie de vivre' pulsing through your design. Try a large pillow in a fun color. Raw silk is a widely used material by Rajisthanis so it may be a fabric to look into, however, there is room for variety as a "punch" item is meant to create contrast.

The Janus et Cie exterior loom furniture collection is also a great line to look into while decorating the patio. The loom furniture is made from Kraft paper twisted around a special galvanized wire. The finish is superior to wicker because it does not snag or snare clothing and it does not wear if properly cared for. The high-quality pieces show little to no signs of aging decades after purchasing. The product comes in espresso, ivory, natural, and outdoor gray, all great choices for easy, unpretentious glamour by the pool. A fabulous lounge chair is the Kona Sofa, which has an oasis-like support bending the natural curve of your back.

The Haute Couture of outdoor furniture, however, is Hugonet. This summer's collection is full of stripes and brights. Hugonet furniture is all hand crafted and can be personalized per request. This particular collection, the Atlanta, Malibu, Sud, Madison, and Victoria each created by different prominent designers, is manufactured from aluminum profiles and painted with powdered polyester paint. The tables are available in sanded or painted glass and there is a removable polyester vinyl fabric for the chaises and sofas.

With color names such as Lagoon and Jamaica, the originality of the hue is expressed in its title. Every color is perfectly unique, yet never garish or even close to tacky. A piece that cannot be overlooked is Frederic Mechiche's deck chair, part of the Malibu line. The mustard yellow frame supports a white and yellow striped cushion in an utterly unexpected design.

Christian Liaigre, creative director of Hugonet's Atlanta line, features a wooden waffle cut out center table with a white aluminum frame sitting low on the ground. Although small items will most likely slip through the squares, the artistic appeal strongly outweighs the need for functionality on this table.

I have mentioned the finest, most exclusive outdoor furniture distributors, but these lines all channel sensibility and beauty while avoiding flashy pomp. Understatement, I firmly believe, will always say more than putting on the Ritz ever will. Have fun with these wildly beautiful and innovative designs this summer, and remember the key ingredient to style success is already in the sea air.

Engel & Völkers: The Global Real Estate Connection

Last Thursday, my colleague David Rattiner and I had the opportunity to sit down at a press conference at the Wölffer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack. This American Winery is designed in the classic European tradition and its pristine view overlooking the wine fields is just the scene you would imagine a Hamptons press conference to look like. Yet this was no ordinary press conference and to tell you the truth, I am not sure there is such a thing as an "ordinary" meeting of the minds especially if it is with one of the worlds leading real estate licensing companies, namely, Engel & Völkers.

Specializing in the sale of high-end property, Engel & Völkers started 30 years ago in Hamburg, Germany. Christian Völkers, the founder and CEO and Engel & Völkers explained, "Our licensed partner system is based on our service concept called 'Made in Germany.'" Their expansion in the United States has been both one of promise and, of course, challenge. Engel & Völkers has offices in Florida, Greenwich, Ct. and New York City. Here on the East End, their residential real estate shop is located at 20 Main Street in the heart of Southampton.

As David and I stepped onto the veranda a handful of people dressed in professional, Hampton-like attire with nametags greeted and adorned us with welcoming smiles and introductions. While half of the Engel & Völkers employees that I met possessed a strong German, Austrian or European accent, the other half did not. This international dynamic made the conference interesting and unusual, and when Bettina Prinzessin Wittgenstein, the Managing Director who flew in from Hamburg, Germany just for the afternoon, began to discuss the growth of the company, astonishment became the universal language for the moment. She explained that last year Engel & Völkers' licensed partners brokered high-end real estate valued at more than $4 billion. Wittgenstein continued to map out the company by remarking that there are over 310 Engel & Völkers residential real estate shops in over 25 countries around the world. The company is present is almost every high-end location worldwide including ski resort areas in Switzerland (St. Mortiz), the entire European Mediterranean (Cote d' Azur, France, Spain, Italy), Dubai, South Africa and Phuket, Thailand. Engel & Vöölkers plans to further their residential real estate shops to New Zealand, Australia and Canada. As for the United States, they plan to have shops in most of the North Eastern states, the Great Lakes Region and California.

The faces of Engel & Völkers

The weather was absolutely divine for a Thursday afternoon, with temperatures reaching well into the high 70s and a sweet breeze that carried along the Sagaponack fields. The food provided by the Wölffer Estate Vineyard was top-of-the-line and the wine supplied by Wölffer measured up likewise to the rest of the accommodations.

As far as the Hamptons market is concerned, Engel & Völkers believes that the demand for high-end residential real estate and Manhattanites' preferred second-home location on the East End is traditionally strong. With the constant demand for luxury properties, Laura Bennett, Managing Director of the Southampton Office, explained, "Above all, it's the global economy and high-performance of investment bankers and Wall Street traders, coupled with a strong Euro and British Pound Sterling, which are providing attractive opportunities for people looking for real estate investments."

As the press conference dwindled down most of the questions were answered about Engel & Völkers' probable expansion in the other East End towns, such as Bridgehampton, East Hampton and Sag Harbor. Engel & Völkers also publishes Global Guide: Lifestyle, People & Real Estate, in print to an international audience for the past decade in English, German and Spanish editions. Global Guide is published quarterly.

Traveling Gypsies

My phone rang at 7 a.m. this morning. I heard my daughter Michele's voice, high-pitched and in great despair.

"Mom, I'm moving out of Sag Harbor," she said.

"What," I said, "Why?"

"These Gypsy moths are driving me crazy. I can't stand it anymore. Anthony had them crawling all over his shirt when he came home from school today. One bit him. He has a rash. It's horrible!"

After I reminded her about the infestation we had fifteen years or so ago, leaving practically every tree and bush stripped of their beautiful leaves and the landscapes practically baron, she calmed down. "There is nothing you can do about this creature. They arrive, they destroy and then they leave," I told her.

The gypsy moth (Lymantria dispar) is of Eurasian origin. Originally ranging from Europe to Asia, it was introduced to North America in the late 1860s and has been expanding its range ever since. Like the tale of the sorcerer's apprentice, the gypsy moth is an example of an experiment gone horribly wrong. The moth was brought to the United States in 1869 in a failed attempt to start a silkworm industry. Escaping soon after, the gypsy moth has become, over the past century, a major pest in the northeastern United States and southeastern Canada. There is only one generation per year.

Gypsy moth egg masses are typically laid on branches and trunks of trees, but egg masses may be found in any sheltered location. Egg masses contain from a couple of hundred to about 1,200 eggs. Tree damage is caused by the insect larvae, or caterpillars, which emerge from their eggs beginning in early spring and continuing through mid-May. The larvae move to the leaves of trees and begin to eat, mostly at night. You can actually hear them chewing the leaves in the evening.

Gypsy moth larvae grow by molting – five molts for males and six for females. Feeding occurs during the "instar" stage between each molt. As might be expected, a caterpillar's appetite increases with each molt. Feeding continues until mid-June or early July when the caterpillar enters the pupal stage emerging, finally, as a moth. After the females lay their eggs from July to September, depending on location, moths of both sexes die.

The gypsy moth caterpillar is not a fussy eater. It has a preference for the leaves of deciduous hardwood trees such as maple, elm and particularly oak. Gypsy moths can also feed on apple, alder, birch, poplar and willow trees. As it grows it will also attack evergreens like pines and spruces. They appear to dislike ashes, sycamores, butternuts, black walnuts, dogwoods and balsams. However, during heavy infestations, competition for food will drive the caterpillar to attack almost any tree or shrub. Most deciduous trees can survive a moderate degree of defoliation. Egg masses appear as 1.5 inch, tan or buff-colored hairs on tree trunks, outdoor furniture or the side buildings.

Gypsy moth caterpillars change appearance as they grow. Young caterpillars are black or brown and about 1/4 inch in length. As they grow, bumps develop along their backs along with coarse, black hairs. Mature caterpillars can be as long as 2.5 inches.

Gypsy moths are seen only in mid-summer. Males are grayish brown and can fly. Females are larger, whitish with black marks and cannot fly. The Gypsy moth can be combated at the egg and larval stages. Egg masses, when discovered, should be burned or soaked in water or kerosene. The caterpillars will crawl underneath the burlap seeking shade. I usually store the ashes from my fireplace in a large garbage bag and in early spring I spread them around the trees closest to my house. It seems to discourage the gypsy to climb the tree.

There are a variety of commercially available pesticides for use in dealing with heavy gypsy moth infestations. Consult your local tree care specialist for information and advice on the use of any these products.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Finally, the colossal closing! Since 2005 rumors have circulated regarding the sale of a 40-acre estate on Further Lane in East Hampton. Until the recent relocation of the historic buildings from the property, both buyer and seller would not officially comment on the sale. This week, the Corcoran Group's East Hampton office has released a statement confirming that they are the brokers to the sale. The historic estate property owned by Adelaide de Menil has gone to contract in excess of $100 million. The property officially transferred on May 31 to billionaire Ron Baron who was reportedly negotiating the sale with Ms. de Menil for more than a year. Mr. Baron had already purchased a neighboring 12-acre parcel in the oceanfront estate area in 2005. The two parties continually denied rumors and kept the deal quiet. But, although details were not made public, it was no secret that the estate sold when the historic buildings that the owner collected over the years were moved and donated to East Hampton Town.

This unprecedented sale makes it evident that the East End market appears to be unstoppable. The Corcoran Group in East Hampton will release a statement when the new owner allows. This sale so far represents the most valuable piece of residential real estate to change hands on the East End to date and the highest ever in the country. Although many of the properties entering the market lately have price tags that keep pushing higher and higher, such as the $80 million North Haven 55-acre estate, the $70 million Three Ponds Farm or the $60 million estate in Southampton, none have actually sold – making this sale positively astounding. Prior to this, Burnt Point on Georgica Pond in Wainscot still held the record since 2005 at $45 million as the highest grossing sale on the East End.

Watching the market continue to elevate, one can only speculate which estates on the East End are capable of selling now and in the near future. It is confirmed that the East End of Long Island, particularly the Hamptons oceanfront estate areas, contains some of the most valuable and sought after soil on earth!

Selling real estate on the East End has become a very big business where the realtors are as well known as the properties they broker. Deals such as these bring huge commissions for the agencies and brokers involved and are extremely complex and require savvy East End knowledge to hold. Many realtors have become millionaires in their own right. Small town agencies seem to be getting fewer and further all the time. Corcoran has taken the East End by storm and has not only bought out many of the local brokers in the villages over the past few years but has also acquired Allan Schneider Associates, once a major player here that held offices on the East End. Prudential Douglas Elliman, Sotheby's International Realty and Brown Harris Stevens have also created a strong presence here. The Hampton Realty Group was formed when a group of local realtors merged and is now spread out through out through most East End towns as an effort to gain strength in the increasingly competitive market.

On the North Fork, another major deal was made not too long ago to bring three Starbucks Coffee shops into the area. The stipulation was, not to bring one, but three franchises in order to make it work. There is already one open in Southold that appears to be quite busy. The Greenport location will be directly across from the town's carousel. The third will be located in Mattituck. The stores are expected to open for business this season.

It seems that even after a few years of being front-page news, real estate is still "what's happening" on the East End. A week does not go by without another phenomenal sale or listing shaking up the marker here. No one seem to tire of it, and for whatever reason, visitors, locals, realtors, prospective buyers and sellers remain intrigued by the exchange of East End real estate.

Home Buyers Warm up to Blanket Mortgages

Finally an Easy & Affordable way to Trade up With Out Selling First

NY- It's no surprise people are hesitant to buy their next home until they sell their existing one because they need the cash from the sale for the down payment.

A scarcely known loan strategy combines both homes under one loan. This releases the equity from the existing home for use as the down payment on the new home without having to sell the existing home first. You may not even need any additional cash toward the new home purchase.

Your probably thinking that the new mortgage payments may be too high to carry, but not so. The risk of carrying both homes is substantially reduced because the carrying costs (monthly payments) are about 50% lower than those of traditional mortgages. This makes it easy to carry the new loan until the existing home is sold and the new loan balance is paid down.

Then the payments can be recalculated to reflect the new lower balance, without the cost refinancing. This gives you the time you need to get top dollar on the sale of your existing home while giving you the power to get a great deal on your trade up home so you can put the cart before the horse or in this case the house.

NATURE'S GIFT

Dear Dan,

I just have to share this with you. My grandson Michael found this baby deer on the curb in the traffic circle on Scuttlehole Road last night. She was just standing there bewildered...so the animal lover that he is and thinking that the baby deer was injured, stopped all the traffic in the circle and picked her up and brought her home to his mom. When Michele called me, I went over to find this little darling sitting and feeling quite safe on her lap, wrapped in a blanket, with a the entire family in awe. After checking the fawn out, she seemed not to be injured, just lost and confused by the traffic and the lights that were shining in her little face. Michele called, I believe the person from the wildlife, and she recommended that she return her to the scene of the crime because surely her "mom was going crazy" looking for her baby. She didn't want to, she wanted to keep her as a pet. I must admit, I myself almost agreed with that, but heart of hearts, and both of us being a mom, thought what if it were my child? So...off they went at midnight, confident that the traffic was nil, returned her to where Michael found her, placing her into the big bushes away from the circle...where she just trotted off into the woods, hopefully to reunite with Mama Deer. I have never experienced such innocence in both child (Michael is 21) and animal...meaning my grandson and Darlin, (which he quickly named her). I know that baby deer have no scent in order to keep away predators. After all that was said and done, when I returned back at my house, I held my hand out to my dog Tino, and lo and behold, he had no clue about my encounter with this beautiful baby deer. So I guess that is a gift from nature.

A dear story. – DR

HALO

Dear Dan,

That was a very interesting and touching story your son David wrote about his mixed roots – he being half Catholic and half Jewish. I would think it would make for a well-rounded young man, with two interesting cultures, beliefs – not necessarily colliding. Were I (I'm Presbyterian by the way - though loosely so – Plain Christian) he, I think I would go to both religious services, honor both - get all I could out of it – study the entire Bible - Old and new. In fact, I did go to a Seder this Passover, had gone to one years back when one of my best friends had one in her apartment – a Debie Abromson, her Uncle Mel and Aunt Blossom. She died of Melanoma in 1999 (only 47 years old), a very special person, surely in heaven! Let me tell you Why! Read on!

At her funeral reception, in her own apartment - October 5 or 6, 1999, there were her close friends and relatives. We had buried her near Spring Valley earlier – in Rockland County across the Hudson River. There had been a very light drizzle as we stood over her grave. Later there were very dark clouds, as seen through her living room window, sun toward the west, as seen by a strong reflection of it off a distant building or house. Strange! I had my camera with me, taking pictures of the people in the living room – (Debbie's). I took one of a 12-year old Portrait of her (the painting done in 1963/'64 or so, she was born November 16, 1951 – a Scorpio) that was hanging on the wall just to the right of the living room window. The result was astonishing! I didn't see it in the camera viewfinder, but it was evident in the photo!

Debbie must have been very special to God, as – there was a fragmented 'rainbow', like arc that came through the living room window, from the reflection off the distant building/house window. It must have somehow been caught by my camera lens, and then it went right around Debbie's head and face in the portrait! A Halo could be seen around her face! Astonishing! I could send you a copy of the photo if you like. In fact, I will – as a slide. I had taken a slide of the photo.

Somewhere in my past - on my mother's side - is the name 'Abrams'. It is on an old tombstone in the Stoneridge Cemetery – upstate NY, not far from Kingston. I believe Abrams is a Jewish name, is it not? Debbie's last name was Abramson. So, I may have some Jewish blood in me, which Adolf Hitler probably would not have liked, right? I'd have been sent to the Holocaust too! Yet there are rumors even Hitler was part Jewish.

So the article written by your son moved me, and I'll have to read it again. Nice photo of him when he was young too - showing both Irish and Jew!

I see you have a new website – www.danshamptons.com. That is good! I also hear your site advertised on 1010 WINS. I knew it had to do with you!

I loved that party you had two years ago - August 12th was it? 45th? How about a 47th! Or, wait till the 50th? I'll come, but I'll be 70 then! I remember how great the food was, Dan! The drinks! Nice of you to do that for people!

I may be out that way this weekend – not sure! I had to cancel a Boston trip I wanted to make due to my poor finances! So, once again – like what I wrote some years ago – "A Poor Man's Weekend In The Hamptons"! Maybe I can afford a steak at Bobby Van's in Bridgehampton.

DON'T TRUST THE MAP

Dear Dan,

In your article on Greenland you state that Greenland is "bigger than the United States." However, Greenland is not bigger than the U.S. A quick search on confirmed that the U.S. landmass is over 9 million square km. while Greenland is just over 2 million sq. km.

I imagine you were tricked by a common error experienced by many people using a wall map of the earth. The earth is not flat so a wall map only gives a rough estimate of the relative sizes of countries. The distortion is greatest around the poles. This is possibly the reason Greenland looked larger than the U.S. to you.

Cordially,

James Byrnes

Police Blotter

I'd Like A Dii Wii Please?

Over Memorial Day Weekend, East Hampton alone reported well over 15 arrests for people that were driving while they were intoxicated. Police also reported issuing an unusually high number of tickets this year for people that were driving while constipated.

No Howard!

A man reported that his XM Satellite radio was taken from his truck while he had it parked at the beach in East Hampton. The burglar did that guy a favor, XM doesn't have Howard Stern.

Spat On

A woman that was going for a jog in East Hampton was spat on by a car that was driving past her. She reported the loogie to police twenty minutes later.

Computer Equipment

Somebody in North Haven stole a credit card number to purchase $1,600 worth of computer equipment. Police are suspecting that it could be a somebody that is completely addicted to porn that made the purchase.

Locked In

A woman in Sag Harbor called police from her bathroom because she had accidentally locked herself inside of it. Police responded to the call and rescued the woman. After investigating, they noticed that a handle on the bathroom door was broken. The woman thanked police by giving them a courtesy flush.

Dog Walker

A man was issued a ticket for walking his dog on the beach during the hours of the day that he was not supposed to be walking his dog on the beach. After the man was given the ticket, the dog, in a desperate attempt to cheer up his owner, licked his face.

Urinating

Police arrested a man for urinating in public in Southampton. In the man's defense, he had a Southampton Village Public Urination Permit.

Fled On Foot

A man in Riverhead was pulled over by police for driving in a manner that suggested he was drunk. When police pulled the man over, he got out of the car and fled on foot. After a brief chase, police were able to catch the man and arrest him. Apparently when the man tried to run, he just ended up spinning around in circles and collapsing on the ground.

Not So Good Workout

A woman that was working out with her personal trainer inside of her home was in the middle of doing a bunch of sit-ups when she noticed that the personal trainer was doing drugs in her bathroom. The woman immediately reported the incident, fired her personal trainer who left and then started screamin' out at the top of her lungs, "You can do it! Come on! Just three more! Stay with it! Keep going!"

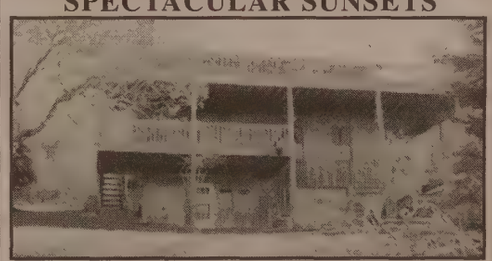
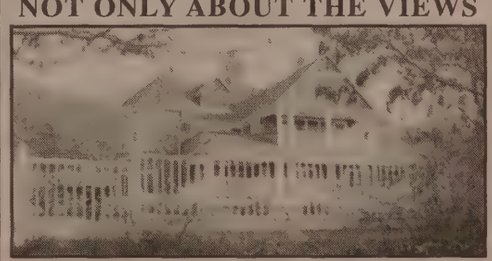
SPECTACULAR SUNSETS



Waterviews don't get any better than those from this hillside home tucked away on a shy half acre. The upper living area has an open floor plan with cathedral ceilings, fireplace, bath, and den. The kitchen opens to an extensive deck that overlooks Fort Pond Bay. On the lower level there are three bedrooms, a bath and a separate living area with one bedroom, one bath and a one car garage. Call to view. $889,000 IN#49248

NOT ONLY ABOUT THE VIEWS



Yes the sunset water views are stunning, and this home is perfectly suited to go along with them. Impeccable details from antique oak entry doors, three fireplaces with hand carved marble mantels, coffered ceilings, amazing trim details and one of a kind light fixtures. The huge eat in kitchen takes in the expansive water view and is finished with the very best appliances. All bedrooms are en suite with their own exits to the deck and pool beyond. Too many details to mention, this home is a must see located in one of Montauk's most desirable neighborhoods. Call to view. $3,950,000.IN#49658

We purchased 52 adjacent acres of rolling terrain. We're adding a new clubhouse designed by celebrated architects Hart/Howerton. We're creating a new private entrance to the club on the property from the existing country club.

WE'RE BREAKING GROUND!

We're working with golf course designers Hurdzan-Fry making the changes in the course to accommodate the new clubhouse, practice facility, and entrance. We'll then add a community of 29 residences commensurate with the golf facility we are creating.

It's going to be the Baiting Hollow Club and it will be the New Crown Jewel of the North Fork.
